Mr. Shapiro's Dread.
In India and in Iowa.
Shall the Idle Hibernate?
Canada, Gold Mountain.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SHOOTING OF gangsters by gangsters continues, and would make an interesting added chapter for Kropotkin's "Mutual Aid as a Factor in Evolution."

Mutual destruction thins the gangster ranks, but the empty places are soon filled.

Benjamin Meyerson, of the Shapiro gang, boasted that he was "the best dressed racketeer in Brownsville." His next costume, not fashionable will be supplied by an undertaker.

JOSEPH GROTTALI, another gangster, was killed near the spot on which Meyerson was placed. Both ex-convicts had been released or let out on bail after crimes that should have made it impossible for them to do any tharm for 20 years at least.

THE CHIEF of their gang, Shapiro, recently killed, had peculiarities. He was not afraid of bullets, and proved it. But he would run, sobbing, if anybody pulled a knife on him.

Our imagination and antecedents rule us. Our ancestors have seen knives and their work for so many hundreds of generations that we all dread them. Bullets are new and we hardly believe in them.

INDIA'S NATIVES, under British law, must submit to modern methods of fighting the plague. They do not like this and fight against it, insisting on their right to swim in the "holy Ganges" River, although corpses of those dead of the plague may be floating upon it.

IOWA'S STATE LAW compels testing of cattle to make sure that they are not tubercular, a good idea, since children get consumption from the milk of tubercular cows. But it seems a bad idea to some Iowa farmers and it has been necessary to call out the militia to protect those that have been sent out to test the cattle.

DISCOVERY OF insulin, marvelous remedy for diabetes, becomes more important and marvelous in view of recent scientific suggestions.

A learned Briton says that insulin would enable the unemployed to hibernate as the groundhog, bear and other animals do in winter, curling up, taking in barely enough oxygen to keep the heart going and eating nothing. Interesting solution of the unemployment and dole problem, perhaps.

But the thought of 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 workers and their families curled up in the dark, all winter, is unpleasant.

ENGLAND WITHDRAWS temporarily from the gold standard and Canada, her stalwart son, announces a Canadian dollar backed with gold the same as the United States dollar. You wonder how soon England's children, Canada and others, may be taking care of their ancient mother?

Not very soon probably, for the power of intellect is in Britain, the most important of all wealth and indestructible.

NO DOUBT OF Canada's ability to carry out her gold standard program.

Humboldt, quoted by Stuart Chase in his excellent new book on Mexico, described Mexico as a mountain of gold with a beggar astride of it.

That description is not accurate now, with Mexico building up industry and developing their resources.

Canada in potential wealth is indeed "a mountain of gold," and those in control are able, modern men, and in proportion to their transactions, our best customers.

THE STOCK MARKET stands extremely well the "gold news," from England. Important stocks yesterday were higher in price than before the news came. This is due in part to the stock exchange having wisely put a ban on "short selling," that is to say, on speculators selling stocks that they do not own, in the effort to lower prices.

Since the stock exchange discouragement of speculators on the short side, which is the side of pessimism, has done so much good, why not continue it?

Every man in Wall street knows that with short selling go rumors harmful to business, innumerable conspiracies against real values.

PEOPLE OF MODERATE means who believe the bottom has been reached, and decide to buy stocks, representing valuable properties, will, if wise, refrain from buying on margin.

In this day of uncertainty, the ALL CASH plan, means safety.

ONE IMPORTANT question is, "WHAT EFFECT WILL BRITAIN'S ACTION HAVE ON SILVER AND ITS VALUE?"

When an empire that reaches around the world says "I can get along without gold if I choose," that is encouraging for silver. But we are a long way from bi-metalism.

In the eyes of high finance, nations are divided into two classes, gold standard and not gold standard. Britain will return to the gold standard, gold parity, ranks as soon as it can be done conveniently.

JAPAN ADMIRES the League of Nations, theoretically, but in matters affecting Japan, that country cares as little about advice or direction from the League as does Mussolini himself.

League authorities are told that shooting Chinese and capturing a Chinese city by Japanese soldiers is a little matter with which they need not interfere. A Chinese-Japanese commission will attend to it.

Stocks Rally Sharply, Wall St. Optimistic

DEFLATION END SEEN IN WAGE ACTION

Termination of Depression In 1921 Under Similar Circumstances Recalled

Wage reductions by United States Steel and other industrial leaders were followed today by these developments:

1—The stock market viewed the action as the first essential step toward stabilization and optimistically soared upward.

2—Jones and Laughlin here announced wage cuts similar to those of its competitors.

3—President Hoover was said to "regret" the situation and organized labor gave indications of opposing the reductions.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23. —(AP.)—Active buying of railroad issues sent the stock market scampering upward today in a rally that lifted principal shares $2 to more than $15.

With the ban on short selling lifted just before the opening and the London market cheerful after its two-day holiday, New York prices were buoyant in the early trading and, after a brief pause for profit-taking, resumed the advance in more lively fashion.

Wall Street was inclined to interpret the wage reduction by United States Steel and other prominent companies as marking a final phase ofthe period of deflation.

RELIEF FOR RAILROADS

The street heard much gossip concerning possible early relief for the railroads, either through higher freight rates or a wage reduction following the cuts just announced by the steel and some other industries. Active short covering swept over the group of rail shares, boosting Delaware & Hudson $15.50, and Union Pacific $12.50. New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania rose $3 to $5.

Industries and utilities followed the rise with advances of $2 to $6. United States Steel common pushed up more than $3.

BAN ON SHORTS LIFTED

Removal of the prohibition against short selling, invoked on Monday as a precaution against demoralizing repercussions of the London gold suspension, was taken to mean that the stock exchange governors considered the emergency passed, nor was there much doubt but that market circles placed a bullish interpretation on the wage cut decisions. It was recalled that similar action 10 years ago had proved to a final phase of the post-war depression.

Buoyant tendencies in the bond market also gave Wall Street cause for rejoicing.

J. & L. Announces Wage Cut Affecting 20,000

The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation will reduce wages on October 1 aproximately 10 per cent.

Announcement of this was made at noon today in a formal statement issued from the offices of the company here.

Approximately 20,000 men are affected, the company announced.

MRS. BENJAMIN P. COLLINGS

Search Centers on Capture of Maniac Recently Paroled.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 23. —(AP.)—Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings, whose husband was slain two weeks ago today in Long Island Sound, will go to Long Island Friday to tell her story at a coroner's inquest, if her presence is requested, Homer S. Cummings, her counsel, said today.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Convinced that Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings is "relieved of all culpability" for her husband's strange death in Long Island Sound, District Attorney Alexander B. Blue, of Suffolk County, today pressed search for a madman, who he believes murdered the Stamford, Conn., engineer.

Detectives and New York police were watching for a man whose name, Blue said, was known. This man, described as a recently paroled lunatic from a New York institution, was missing from his usual haunts.

Three certain youths also were sought on the possibility that one might be the youth who boarded the cruiser Penguin with an older man and molested Mrs. Collings after throwing her husband into the sound.

Blue's announcement that Mrs. Collings was above suspicion came as a surprise to his staff of detectives. Previously he had expressed doubts about her story.

POLICE ACCUSED IN VOTE PROBE

STRIP RIOT BLAMED ON SULLIVAN

Crowd Jeers and Cheers as Alderman and 17 Start For Prison; Police Use Gas

Police were described as "gunmen and gangsters" by Alderman Luke Sullivan today in testifying in Penn Avenue Police Station in the arrest of himself and 17 others charged with inciting to riot following a disturbance in front of his office, 2814 Penn avenue, last night.

All 18 defendants were held for court by Magistrate James J. O'Connor, while warrants were issued for arrest of Sullivan's brother, Congressman P. J. Sullivan, his son-in-law, Police Magistrate William McNamara, and Constable Luke Hannan.

Learning that they were being sought, Congressman Sullivan and McNamara sent $1,000 bond each to the police station, pending court trial on charges of inciting to riot. Hannon provided $2,000 bail on a like charge in addition to one of pointing firearms.

RUM EVIDENCE SEIZED

County detectives went to Alderman Sullivan's office this afternoon and took charge of liquor seized in raids. Sullivan's followers declared the police were trying to seize this evidence. It was placed in the county detective headquarters.

The liquor had been confiscated yesterday, Constable Hannan told the county sleuths, when he raided the home of John Sarnosky, 3120 Brereton avenue, and the confectionery of Joe Chester, 2929 Penn avenue.

The raid marked another outbreak in the feud between the Sullivan brothers and the Kline administration. Police were alleged to have given permission to reputed bootleggers to "open up" prior to the primaries.

Alderman Sullivan testified Constable Hannon was arresting a man in front of his place last night when Patrolman Joseph O'Toole interfered. Two hours later he said the "police gangsters" arrived, and when the crowd entered his office the police threw tear gas bombs.

Sullivan declared he was not arrested by police but by John Burke, ex-pugilist of the Strip. He added:

"This is not going to end here."

New Yorker Reveals Names in Fee Plot

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Dr. William F. Doyle, former fire department horse doctor, who amassed a fortune in a variety of building permit negotiations, today told the Hofstadter legislative committee the names of some of the persons with whom he split fees. The names he gave were not those of officials or politicians, but of lawyers, real estate dealers and architects.

BRADDOCK OVERSEER TESTIFIES

Prevented From Carrying Out Duties, Official Charges; Ballots Gone

A Braddock election overseer's testimony that police controlled by M. J. Verosky, lieutenant of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, prevented him from performing his duties at the September 15 primary and the decision of District Attorney Andrew T. Park to subpena 326 minority election inspectors featured today's developments in the grand jury investigation of alleged election thievery.

Other highspots were:

1—After refusing yesterday to permit County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern to place watchers in the recount board rooms, Judge James R. Macfarlane, in charge of the board, told Bar Association Election Fraud Committee that "disinterested" watchers would be allowed. McGovern planned to ask a court order authorizing his watchers.

2.—A metallurgical expert conferred with Assistant District Attorney Clunk, apparently for the purpose of studying damaged handle pins of voting machines which went out of order early election day.

3.—A county detective was assigned to Baltimore to represent Allegheny County next week in its effort to extradite Edward L. Funk, accused of tampering with the voting machines that failed.

4.—The Allegheny County Bar Association Committee on Election Frauds convened to formulate plans to expedite and strengthen investigation of the alleged election thefts and ballot tampering.

The Braddock overseer, S. H. Rothrauff, of 1000 Talbot avenue, told the grand jury his story of the Braddock Police Department's

HIGH BIDS GET GARBAGE JOB

The long-disputed garbage and rubbish disposal contract for 1932 was awarded today by Director C. B. Maits, of the City Health Department, to the American Reduction Company and the Allegheny Garbage Company, a subsidiary, high bidders.

Closing of three Pittsburgh banks had affected the financial status of the Modern Service Company, the low bidder, and a statement by Charles B. Prichard, secretary and treasurer of this company, set forth that it would be unable to fulfill the terms of the contract. The Modern Service Company's bid was estimated as $102,000 below that of its competitor.

Charles A. Bardolph, president of the Franklin Savings and Trust Company, which closed its doors Monday, was president of the Modern Service Company. The company had no complaint on rejection of its bid, the Prichard statement asserted.

Carnegie Coal Rate Appeal Dismissed

Because the court was without jurisdiction, Judge Nelson McVicar in Federal court today dismissed the appeal of the Carnegie Steel Company's suit for $240,574 against the Pennsylvania and seven other railroads.

The steel company claimed rate for coal shipments to Munhall and Clairton plants in April, 1922, were unjust. The Interstate Commerce Commission had held that rates to Munhall were unreasonable, but to Clairton were not excessive.

Accomplice of Fagan Assailant on Trial

Frederick Schneider, alias Hatfield, of Fleming, Ky., alleged accomplice of Pat Murphy, Kentucky miner, when the latter attempted to kill Patrick T. Fagan, district president of the United Mine Workers, last July, and was killed by his own gun, went on trial today accused of a series of holdups and robberies. Charles Rutzel, of Shaw avenue, testified Schneider robbed him of $35 in Northumberland street July 25.

Legislature Called In Yates Ouster Row

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Failing to receive the resignation of Roy T. Yates as state senator from Passaic County yesterday, Gov. Morgan F. Larson issued a call for a special session of the Legislature for next Monday night.

The session has been called to take action in the case of Yates, who was found wounded in the New York apartment of Miss Ruth Jayne Cranmer several weeks ago.

Mother Pleads to Free Son in Store Murder

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A widowed mother today appeared before the State Board of Pardons to ask commutation of her only son's second degree murder sentence, that he may be freed to support her.

She asked the board to make possible a parole for Gilbert W. Kelly, convicted of second degree murder for his part in the holdup and murder of a Boggs & Buhl messenger, James H. Neal, on the North Side, 10 years ago.

A similar plea was refused last June, when Mrs. Margaret Neal, the messenger's widow, of 3720 Wapello street, objected. Mrs. Kelly says her husband died shortly after the refusal.

As Kelly was convicted prior to the passage of the Ludlow act, he was sentenced in 1922 to serve 19 years and 11 months to 20 years in the Western Penitentiary. An act passed in the last session of the Legislature reduced his sentence to 10 to 20 years, making him eligible for parole next June. Mrs. Kelly says she seeks communtation of her son's sentence because he had served a year in jail prior to sentence.

Akron to Take Air Today; Weather Ban Lifted

AKRON, O., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The U. S. S. Akron, largest airship in the world, today faced the beginning of her reign as queen of the skies.

Weather's three-day barrier against a majestic debut was seen late last night by the naval board of inspection and survey to be lifted as the influence of a low pressure area moved away from Akron.

Second of America's home-made dirigibles, she had only to prove on the maiden flight that she can fly; later tests will take her measure as the world's largest, fastest, and strongest airship.

The massive dock, where she has stood stolidly pinned to a mobile mooring mast since soon after the christening ceremony August 8, teemed with life as last-minute preparations were hurried for take-off at 4 o'clock (Pittsburgh time).

Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, on whose shoulders as skipper rests the responsibility for the $5,375,000 air queen beamed approval that his charge was ready for her conquest.

LEGION COMMISSION URGES BEER TO RELIEVE JOB CRISIS

CHANGE IN DRY LAW CHEERED BY VETERANS

Modification Demand Hurls Convention Into Tumult; Portland Wins Next Meet

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

DETROIT, Sept. 23.—Modification of the Volstead act to legalize the sale and manufacture of real beer, within the limitations of the constitution, was proposed to the American Legion's convention today by its National Employment Commission.

The Commission declared legalized beer would put hundreds of thousands of unemployed back to work. The recommendation was laid before the convention by Howard M. Savage, former national commander and the committee's chairman.

Portland, Ore., today was chosen as the 1932 convention city.

OVATION FOR BEER

The declaration in favor of legalized beer was given a tumultuous reception by the veterans who cheered and applauded. Savage made the suggestion in behalf of the committee after filing its formal report on unemployment relief solely to relieve unemployment.

The committee's avowal of beer throws tremendous force behind the drive to put the Legion on record as favoring a modification of prohibition. The beer recommendation was filed as a supplement to the committee's unemployment relief report which calls for each local post to find jobs for the unemployed at home, declares for a holiday on all immigration and demands increased construction of public works by federal, state and municipal governments.

BACKS LABOR STAND

The committee recommended beer solely on economic grounds, declaring that its legalization to some alcoholic extent far beyond the present one-half of one per cent, but still within the constitutional limitations, would put "hundreds of thousands of unemployed back at work. This was the same argument advanced by the American Federation of Labor when it went formally on record as favoring legalization of beer.

Meanwhile, the convention was prepared to reject a demand for full cash payment of the bonus.

Administrator of Veteran Affairs Hines today gave the Legion another warning on the issue when he told the convention not to risk public goodwill for any immediate further payment. He spoke from the same platform from which President Hoover delivered a similar appeal Monday.

VICTORY FOR HOOVER

President Hoover will be credited with a moral victory when the Legion declares it will forgo demanding the cash bonus because its first duty is to the country but the verdict was arranged before the executive came to Detroit.

Detroit slowly recovered today from its amazement at the magnificent spectacle staged by the Legion when 110,000 World War veterans marched before a crowd of 1,500,000 citizens in a parade that required eight hours to pass a given point.

The parade literally shocked Detroit, far exceeding any other spectacle in its history. There were far more veterans in line here than ever before in the Legion's history.

One of the records set for Detroit was in the number of casualties. Hospitals and first aid stations reported having treated 2,000 cases, only a few of which were serious.

Lindberghs Finish Third Flood Survey

NANKING, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh returned here today after making their third flood relief aerial survey for the Chinese government.

The Lindberghs surveyed the area around Wuhu on the Yangtse River from here. They reported the situation was as bad as they had found it along the grand canal in Northern Kiangsu province on their first two flights.

Legion's 'Big Day' Hailed by Gibbons

Red-Fire Parading Over, Now Comes The Voting

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Journalist and Radio Reporter

DETROIT, Sept. 23.—Hello everybody.

Today is a big day for the American Legionnaires in convention here. Parading is over. Now it's voting. They are under orders to bring home the bacon on one or more issues. Like good soldiers they have started to carry out orders. They have put away their torpedo canes and red fire and there's more jockeying and electioneering than there were band concerts a few days ago.

BOUND BY ORDERS

Telegraph wires have been sizzling with orders not to go back on any instructions. Many of the boys have been going around with long faces because of these orders. But they have bucked up again and are ready to tackle any proposition whether it looks like a sure thing or a sure loser. Orders to stick by or oppose the bonus and prohibition measures in the Legion program have been especially troublesome. Then when open debate on both subjects was granted by Commander O'Neil there was a sigh of relief. It gave delegates a chance to go on record win or lose.

COMMANDER RUMORS

There were many worried Legionnaires over such orders. The field finally narrowed down to nine candidates for commander and their backers refused to quit. They're still running. There are George W. Malone of Nevada, Edgar Dunlap of Georgia, John A. Elden of Ohio, Ray Murphy of Iowa, Emmet O'Neal of Kentucky, Louis Johnson of West Virginia, Henry L. Stephens of North Carolina, Rice W. Means of Colorado, and Wayne C. Holsworth of New York.

Today there's some hot information on the race for commander. It comes right out from under the General's table, as the boys used to say in the Army. Wise Legion leaders say it lies between Henry Stephens and Ray Murphy. Both of them are lawyers. Stephens is the youngest candidate in the field.

Gibbons Given Wild Ovation By Legion

DETROIT, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Floyd Gibbons, the great war correspondent, was given a wild ovation when Commander O'Neil called him to the platform today. The veterans cheered and when Gibbons began talking, they bandied remarks with him to show their affection, Gibbons said:

"There is distress abroad in the land. In some instances, there has been violence.

"If it comes to violence there were 3,000,000 of you over in France who know a lot about violence, and if it comes to violence here, which, God forbid, the country will find you still know something about it."

Montagu Norman Home From Canada

LIVERPOOL, England, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, returned today on the liner Duchess of Bedford from a five-week visit to Canada, ostensibly to improve his health.

Having wirelessed for a tender to meet him, he dashed for the London express as soon as he reached the landing stage and began dictating letters to a secretary before the train left the station.

Ex-Rebel Pledges Support in China

PEIPING, China, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Yen Hsi Shan, former governor of Shansi, who led a revolt against the Nanking government last year, today telegraphed Chang Hsueh-Liang, the Manchurian governor, pledging his support in the present crisis.

DUQUESNE VOTE HEARING SET

Four Duquesne policemen, including the police chief, together with three other residents of the city, were awaiting a hearing today on charges of violating the election laws and assault said to have taken place during the primary last week.

Those arrested include Chief Thomas Flinn, Patrolmen George Wallington, William Saltus and Murt Shaughnessey, charged with election law violations; and Charles Temer, Timothy Long and William Malloy, charged with assault.

The hearing has been set for tomorrow night before Alderman John Kenna, 134 South Beatty street. Flinn and his police were arrested yesterday afternoon at the police station. Mayor James Crawford of Duquesne posted a $11,000 blanket bond for the seven men.

Constable Dan Stacey, with five other residents of the city, charged that the police protected imported thugs and intimidated voters. Stacey said he fired into the ground when he was attacked, and the police arrested him but let his assailants go free.

Nick Dubiac said he was beaten with blackjacks by thugs who escaped when the police arrested him for disorderly conduct.

Two Strikers Jailed After Clash at Mine

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 23.—Following a clash between approximately 500 striking miners of the J. A. Paisley owned Valley Camp mines east of this city last night, Tom Johnson, 26, and Mack Morgan, 35, strikers, are in the Ohio County Jail, held under $10,000 bond each, charged with conspiracy to violate the Redman act.

State Trooper B. F. McLaughlin was injured when struck by a brick.

COMMONS CUTS GOLD DEBATE

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—At the same time the London Stock Exchange was closing firmly at the end of the first day's trading after a two-day suspension, the British government's temporary abandonment of the gold standard came up for debate in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The debate did not last for long, however, for a Laborite member introduced a question which the government declined to answer and the speaker of the House immediately cut off further discussion of the subject.

The question was asked by Edward Frank Wise, Labor M. P. Pointing out that the treasury had borne the cost of the $200,000,000 Franco-American credit extended to the Bank of England in July, he asked whether depreciation of the pound sterling would not mean an inevitable loss of between £20,000,000 and £30,000,000 and consequent "unbalancing" of the budget.

1,000 CATHOLIC WOMEN OPEN CONVENTION

Bishop Kelly of Oklahoma Urges District Group to Fight World's Blindness

One thousand Catholic women from the Pittsburgh district paraded today from Synod Hall in Craig street to St. Paul's Cathedral, where the eleventh annual convention of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women was formally opened with the celebration of solemn high mass.

The Rt. Rev. Francis Kelly, bishop of Oklahoma, delivered the sermon while the celebrant of the mass was the Rev. Father Philip Callery of Pittsburgh. The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of Pittsburgh diocese, was in the sanctuary.

The procession was led by Miss Mary S. Hawks, of Washington, D. C., national president, and Mrs. Mary Hogan, president of the Pittsburgh council.

Bishop Kelly spoke on the blindness of the world in this era of madness for money, of corruption and of lax morals, and declared if the women had organized into these councils simply to show solidarity, they may as well disband because this is simply pride. He added:

"If you are organized to aid your church to clear the blindness of the world, then carry on your work."

Following the services at the Cathedral the delegation, representing 10 counties of Western Pennsylvania, returned to Synod Hall where they were officially welcomed by Bishop Boyle. Mrs. Leonard T. Shea was chairman of a luncheon at Webster Hall for the visitors, and Miss Hawks was a speaker. Business meetings were being held this afternoon.

Stocks in Big Rally

spite wage cuts made by leading corporations yesterday.

The action of United States Steel and Bethlehem Steel Corporations and the General Motors Corporation in reducing wages was regretted in administration quarters.

No official statements were forthcoming. It was said informally at the White House, however, that the President had been consistent in his desire to keep the standard of living up.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Announcement of wage cuts in steel, motor, rubber and copper industries was subject today to a variety of interpretation.

Organized labor proclaimed its resistance. Some financial writers attributed to unnamed business leaders the belief that the step would hasten a revival of business. Formal statements of corporations concerned merely stressed unsatisfactory present conditions or new standards of value.

STEEL TAKES LEAD

United States Steel took the initiative and announced a 10 per cent cut affecting 220,000 employes October 1. Bethlehem Steel followed suit. It will reduce wages 10 per cent October 1 for 50,000 employes. Youngstown Sheet and Tube ordered a corresponding cut.

The General Motors Corporation announced a 10 to 20 per cent reduction for 25,000 salaried employes. Some 150,000 employed on an hourly wage basis will not be affected.

The United States Rubber Company announced a five-day working schedule starting October 1. This will mean a reduction of about 9 per cent in wages to 25,000 employes. The hourly scale will not be touched, but no one will be given more than five days' work.

The American Smelting and Refining Company and the Utah Copper Company announced 10 per cent wage reductions, effective October 1.

RESISTANCE FORECAST

A forecast of resistance came from Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, after the announcement by United States Steel. He said:

"I can only express great regret and profound disappointment at the action of the United States Steel Corporation. The disappointment is particularly justified because this action is in sharp contradiction with that of the same corporation some time ago in reducing dividends, but declining to cut wage scales. At that time the attitude of the United States Steel Corporation was received with satisfaction by all who believed that any dislocation of wage schedules would be a most disturbing factor, economically and socially.

SEES RESISTANCE

"All I can say is that the action of the United States Steel Corporation will certainly not be helpful, regardless of the causes that may have prompted it. I fear that this action may well encourage others to do likewise and prove the result of even more serious perturbations than we have yet witnessed in the nation's economic life. A general policy of wage cuts holds out the danger of serious industrial conflicts, for it is inconceivable that the workers will take this blow without resistance."

JAPAN DENIES 'ASPIRATIONS' IN CHINA

Ambassador Gives Stimson Assurances; Tension at Washington Is Lessened

By PIERCE MILLER
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Although the attitude of the American government toward Japanese occupation of Southern Manchuria remained obscure today, the tensity of the situation was somewhat eased after Japanese Ambassador Debuchi assured Secretary of State Stimson that Japan had no "territorial aspirations" regarding the Chinese province.

A report of yesterday's meeting of the League of Nations' council reached the State Department today. It was sent with the hope this government might offer its help toward persuading Japan to withdraw its troops.

Debuchi informed Stimson that Japan recognized the right of the League of Nations to inquire into seizure of Mukden and other southern Manchurian towns, and that Japan would submit to the league, on request, all information regarding the incident.

TOKIO, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Despite intervention by the League of Nations in an effort to solve the Sino-Japanese dispute in Manchuria, fears were felt here today that a clash would soon develop in the vicinity of Shaopaishan.

Reports received here stated that Chinese troops from Kirin had refused to lay down their arms and were concentrating at Shaopaishan in anticipation of a battle. Meanwhile, Japanese occupation of Manchurian territory continued. The city of Tunhwa was taken today, making 14 occupied during the last few days.

A tense situation prevailed in Harbin, where merchants suspended business and residents were placed under protection of the military. Heavy detachments of troops were being brought into the city by airplane.

Soviet directors of the Chinese Eastern Railway met to consider means of protecting the line from interruption by the warring forces.

JOB AID SEEN IN RATE RAISE

AKRON, O., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, today told the Great Lakes Regional Advisory Board that granting of the railroads' proposal for a 15 per cent freight increase would promote stabilization of business and employment.

Willard said a resultant increased revenue would put the railroads in a position during a "temporary period of depression" to maintain their forces so far as could be justified by the volume of business and good practice and continue their ordinary maintenance program.

Supporting his argument, Willard asserted that in normal business times, all of the railroads purchase as much as 28 per cent of the entire annual steel output, an equal amount of lumber, an equal or greater percentage of the coal output and large quantities of copper, rubber, oil, cement and many other articles for maintenance purposes.

Eastern Bankers Acquire Giannini Chain Control

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The death knell of an ambition for a nation-wide chain of banks was sounded today.

Control of the Transamerica Corporation, a $2,000,000,000 holding concern for financial houses, has passed out of the hands of the Giannini family of California to Lee, Higginson & Co., New York and Boston bankers.

Three partners of Lee, Higginson & Co. have replaced Amadeo P. Lawrence and Attilio H. Giannini on the Transamerica directorate. The Gianninis formed Transamerica in 1928.

Elisha Walker, chairman of Transamerica, in a letter to stockholders, said Transamerica would relinquish control of all its banks including the Bank of America (New York); the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association (California), and the First National Bank of Portland, Ore. Transamerica will hereafter invest in bank securities without acquiring control.

Amadeo Peter Giannini, the 60-year-old head of his family's interests, was born in San Jose, Cal. He attended business school for three months, remained in his father's produce business for a time and then embarked on a remarkable financial career.

Episcopalians May Debate Beer Resolution

DENVER, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The general convention of the Episcopal church may have an opportunity to express itself on a proposal calling for modification of the prohibition laws to allow manufacture and sale of beer.

Convention observers thought the resolution likely would originate in the committee of 21 composed of seven bishops, seven priests and seven laymen, named to consider world problems.

The committee has before it a resolution presented from the diocese of central New York asking Congress to authorize a national referendum on prohibition. It was presented in the House of Deputies several days ago and referred to the committee without debate.

Lively debate marked a session of the deputies at which action was taken to limit women's work in the church ministry to the order of deaconesses. The Rev. J. Howard Melsih, of Brooklyn, led the opposition. He said:

"Men and women are on an equality of citizenship. In law, medicine, education and other fields, women have demonstrated their ability and fitness. Yet here we are discriminating against women in the service of Jesus."

Organized unity between the Episcopal, Presbyterian and Methodist churches was described as not impossible of attainment in a majority report to the House of Deputies, which noted an increasing harmony between the three denominations.

ILLNESS OF MOTHER-IN-LAW DELAYS KANE'S HEARING

STORY ON LOVE NOTES VITAL, STATE SAYS

Kin Disgraced, Position Gone, Mate Dead, Chair Holds No Terror, Teacher Says

By MARGARET LANE
International News Service.

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 23.—Because Mrs. W. C. Graham, mother of the dead Jenny Kane, was confined to her bed from a nervous breakdown, the preliminary hearing of Prof. Elisha Kent Kane, charged with deliberately drowning his wife, was postponed until a week from today.

In asking for the postponement, Prosecutor Roland Cock declared that the testimony of the mother of the drowned girl was so important that he could not proceed without it. She had been expected to testify about letters to Kane from Betty H. Dahl, of Mt. Holly, N. J., which members of the Graham family said had been seen by Mrs. Kane and had caused her "great unhappiness."

WOMEN CROWD COURT

Prof. Kane, cool and unruffled, sat through the legal formalities in the front row of a courtroom crowded to the doors with spectators, who drove into town from miles around. Most of them were women or young girls.

A short time before the professor, in an exclusive interview with an International News Service correspondent, declared:

"Physical death is not so terrible to me as life without the things I have lived for.

"Even if I escape the electric chair, my position—such as it is—is gone, my family disgraced, my wife dead—

"Wouldn't you think I had suffered enough, my wife dying as she did under my very eyes, without this happening?

"It never crossed my mind that anyone would think that I had killed her. You see, whatever people may say, I was very fond of her and we had been happy together.

"But when I came back from the funeral the police were there and I was arrested as a murderer.

DOESN'T CARE MUCH

"Then there was another shock for me. I learned that the most damning statements that had been made against me originated with my wife's mother. I couldn't believe that she could say such untruths. I don't want to be bitter about anyone, but I cannot help thinking she must have been worked upon by her husband and son. They always disliked me.

"It's a strange thing. In a way I'm glad its come to a trial. Now that suspicion has been voiced against me, I want to fight it to the bitter end.

"I may prove my innocence—I may not. Either way I don't particularly care. Death isn't really important."

Patient Leaves Bed To Help Rescue Lost Surgeon

HELENA, Mont., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—R. J. Avery was resting comfortably today and "doing very well," which wouldn't be unusual except:

Monday Avery appeared at a hospital here for an appendicitis operation. The surgeon was missing—had been over the weekend.

Avery arose from the hospital bed, donned his clothes and joined a searching party which found the surgeon and his wife who had been stalled by a broken propeller of their boat.

The surgeon, Dr. David T. Berg, recovered from the exposure and night of vigil, operated on Avery yesterday.

MISS JOSEPHINE CHERVAN . . . DAWN BROKE DAMP, FOGGY

Miss Josephine Chervan, 4-month-old baby, who spent the night in West Park with her penniless parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chervan, jobless and homeless. Police today are helping them.

BABY, 4 MONTHS, PARK LODGER

Out of work and penniless, Walter Chervan and his wife, Sylvia, with their 4-month-old daughter, Josephine, sought a secluded spot in West Park early today and waited for the dawn, which broke damp and foggy. The Chervans had walked the streets since yesterday afternoon.

It was the first case of a baby sleeping in a park that had come to police attention.

Patrolman Sam Jones observing them on a park bench, heard their story, then took them to North Side Police Station, where they were provided with food and a place to sleep.

Chervan told police he had been unemployed for several months and that they had been staying at a rooming house in the 1700 block of Forbes street, where the wife had helped with the housework for their room and board. Yesterday there was a disagreement and the Chervans left.

Police were debating the next move.

Chervan, a native of Serbia, served in the Serbian army during the World War, during which he was wounded three times and once decorated for the capture, singlehanded of 80 Germans.

He has been unemployed for 18 months and frequently during the past six months, Chervan said, both he and his wife have gone without food for days.

Wilkins' Crew Describes Perils Under Sea

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Running under the Arctic ice cap in a submarine is like running blindfolded through a forest and continuously banging into trees, members of Sir Hubert Wilkins' Polar submarine expedition said on their arrival here today.

Several members of the crew of Sir Hubert's submarine, Nautilus, in London today preparing to return to the United States Friday, eagerly discussed their experiences.

Electrician Holland said:

"When we were under the ice it was like running through a forest blindfolded, banging into the trees. We hit plenty, too.

"The noise of the ice crunching against the sides of the boat was terrifying at first, but we soon realized that the shape of our boat made it like a drum, and the noise was much worse than the actual danger."

Holland expressed confidence that only the month's delay occasioned by the necessity of making repairs at Southampton after crossing the Atlantic prevented the Nautilus from reaching the North Pole, as Sir Hubert planned. When the start finally was made it was too late in the season, Holland said.

85 MEXICANS HANGED FOR LYNCHING

Governor Punishes Town For Killing Mayor Accused Of Causing Girl's Death

By ARTHUR CONSTANTINE
International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23.—The wholesale hanging of 85 residents of the town of Villa Guerrero in Tabasco State by a punitive military expedition dispatched by Gov. Tomes Garrido was revealed in messages received here today.

The men were put to death because they had lynched Lieut. Luis Charles, Mayor of the town, following the death of a young girl he was alleged to have kidnaped. She fell from a horse on which she was being taken to a mountain hideaway and sustained fatal injuries.

The indignant townspeople formed posses and captured Charles, hanging him to a tree after a summary trial.

The people fled to the mountains in panic when the troops arrived, but the soldiers gave pursuit. For six days the townspeople held out in a makeshift "garrison" high in the mountains. The siege ended when their scanty supplies of food ran out.

Before they handed themselves over to the troops, however, the villagers extracted promises of safe conduct to their homes. Halfway back to the town, the column stopped, and under orders from the commanding officer, the riflemen seized and bound 85 of the helpless, emaciated crowd.

Without ceremony, they were strung up on trees along the road. The commanding officer read an order from Gov. Garrido announcing they would remain there indefinitely as a warning to the countryside, and that anyone who tried to cut the bodies down would meet with a similar fate.

GANDHI, CHAPLIN DISCUSS ERA

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi, who leads millions toward liberty, and Charlie Chaplin, who makes millions laugh, today cherished a friendship of mutual understanding.

At Chaplin's behest they met for the first time yesterday in the East End home of one of the Indian leader's friends.

They talked 15 minutes—not about India or the silver screen, but about machinery. Sitting side by side on a sofa, Chaplin told Gandhi he did not understand why the latter championed the use of the spinning wheel in place of modern appliances. Gandhi told him:

"We might install modern looms like they have in Lancashire, but then we would produce more than we need and enforce idleness upon some other part of the world as a result of our over production."

COUNTY CLERK, AIDES INDICTED

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—William C. Stiglitz, who resigned from the office of Jefferson County clerk last week, and two of his aides, were indicted by a county grand jury here, charged with misappropriating approximately $25,000 of state funds.

Indicted with Stiglitz are Miss Evelyn Albus, formerly in charge of automobile license sales for Stiglitz, and Frank H. Hehemann, Jr., formerly chief deputy clerk.

Stiglitz posted bond of $30,000 but Hehemann and Miss Albus were not apprehended. They disappeared several days ago. Stiglitz resigned after Louisville newspapers had charged irregularities had been found in state tax commission funds collected on automobile licenses.

BEAVER SOCIETY FRAUD

BEAVER, Pa., Sept. 23.—Declaring his innocence, H. Clay Sexton, certified public accountant, charged with fraudulent conversion, took the stand in his own defense shortly before noon today. Sexton is alleged to have obtained $100,000 worth of securities by fraud from Mrs. Jean P. Dawson and Mrs. Vye S. Thompson, widow of Col. Joe Thompson, Patetrson Heights society leaders.

Admitting that he had handled stock transactions for Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Thompson Sexton asserted that their holdings had been wiped out as well as his own in the stock market collapse of 1930.

The trial, being heard by Judge W. A. McConnel, entered its third day today and, as before, the courtroom was crowded to the doors with Beaver society folk.

PINCHOT SEES NEW CAREER FOR BUTLER

Declares 'More to Be Heard' Of General as Marines Pay Their Parting Tributes

QUANTICO, Va., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—As a spectator at the last charge he will command, Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler today came to the end of his official duties with the Marines.

It was his farewell party, so he was designated to sit on the sidelines as 2,000 men and officers whom he has led staged a spectacular attack on the Marine Corps base here.

Their charge, reminiscent of many he has led in foreign lands, marked the end of Butler's 33 years of colorful service as a soldier of the sea. One week from tomorrow he becomes a civilian for the first time since he was a boy, but his duties ended today.

Until October 1 he has nothing to do but pack his house furnishings preparatory to moving to his new home at Newtown Square, in Pennsylvania.

PINCHOT SPEAKS

He will carry with him a prediction of Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, that more will be heard from him "soon."

Speaking last night at a smoker given by the Marines in honor of their retiring commander, Pinchot described him as "the greatest leader and builder of morale in the United States today," and added:

"We are all going to hear more from Gen. Butler soon."

With his voice shaking, Butler yesterday told the men who participated in a final dress parade for him, they had given him "something to remember the rest of his life."

The parade was a formal affair made less so by Butler's well-known informality. Standing arm in arm with Mrs. Butler, the General returned the salutes of his fellow officers. The parade had not progressed far, however, before he was shouting to straighten straggling lines which passed in front of him.

SPURS SINGERS

No sooner had the parade passed than Butler bounded down off the stand, lighted a cigaret and directed the formation of groups of men into a male chorus.

The first song was a trifle low. The leader spurred the men to sing with "more tempo" and strength. He proclaimed:

"Tempo, Hell! Just sing!"

School Board Asks Probe Of Teachers' Conduct

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 23.—Prosecuting Attorney Albert Shuman today had before him a formal request from the Morgantown School Board that he file charges against three members of the Morgantown High School staff.

This action culminated several weeks because of charges and counter-charges, which have divided the town because of the alleged conduct of the principal and two teachers.

At the school board meeting last night a "self-constituted" committee headed by Attorney George R. Farmer, asked that the school board, which had been accused of covering up, take a definite step.

Those affected by the board's action last night are Principal J. T. West, Blanche Garfield and Esther Williams, high school teachers.

Cossack rule at the polls shortly before noon.

He had appeared earlier before the returning board after members of the election board in his district had been called in to account for irregularities in their return sheet.

After hearing his story Judges George V. Moore and Elder W. Marshall asked Rothstuss to report to the District Attorney which he did, going before the jury a few minutes later.

McGOVERN SEEKS WATCHERS

Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, representing Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, this afternoon was preparing to petition Common Pleas Court to permit McGovern to place two watchers at each of the five tables of the precinct where the ballots cast in McGovern's apparent victory over County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong are being tabulated.

Judge MacFarlane yesterday refused an informal request of McGovern to authorize the watchers. It was Judge MacFarlane who ordered 7,500 names replaced on the voting lists after the Registration Commission had ruled them off as illegal and who refused McGovern the right to post watchers over the ballot boxes pending the official count.

EVIDENCE GROWS

Out of a mass of charges of fraud and election thievery, the District Attorney's office it was claimed today is slowly obtaining such the evidence upon which indictments may be based.

The grand jury will not offer its presentments in its present investigation, for at least a week, District Attorney Andrew T. Park said.

Meantime Park and his assistants continued their questioning of election board officials, particularly the minority inspectors, a task it is understood which is yielding their valuable information.

300 FAIL TO ANSWER

Exactly 328 of the 812 minority inspectors have not answered requests to appear before the District Attorney and submit their tally sheets for checking against the figures which finally reached the returning board, Park said.

Subpenas he added will be issued at once for these inspectors.

Other members of several election boards were taken before the District Attorney today and questioned regarding their knowledge of information which later is to be presented to the grand jury.

The mystery of the missing return sheet of Forward Township bobbed up again before the returning board today.

The sheet had been missing from election night until yesterday when Roy Walters, Commissioner Armstrong's secretary, appeared before the returning board and told it that the sheet had been in a vault in the Commissioners office since Thursday night.

LEFT WITH WALTERS

Roy Porter, Forward Township election judge, went before the board today and said that he had taken the sheet to the Election Bureau Thursday at 8:30 p. m. There was no one in the bureau he said, so he asked Walters to keep it for him until the next day.

Friday however, Porter claimed he was seized with an ailment as a result of working 46 hours while tabulating the votes and was unable to reach the Courthouse until today.

2 Election Boards Called In Missing Ballot Quiz

Two election boards were summoned for hearings today by Judges George V. Moore and Elder W. Marshall sitting as the return board, to explain the absence of 850 missing stubs. The board of the Second District, Third Ward, Braddock, that 500 missing stubs from their return envelopes had been placed in the ballot box. Opening of the box disclosed that its lock had been broken, but that the stubs were there. The board of the Ninth District, Fifth Ward, Pittsburgh, must account for 50 missing stubs.

A second Braddock election board, that of the Second District, Fourth Ward, has been summoned to explain why the small party tally sheet and returns were unsigned.

Additional districts completed by return board today showed

Election Indictments Will Take Time—Park

District Attorney Andrew T. Park has announced that no presentment will be made to the court for some time. He made the statement before the grand jury went into session today to consider regular business, declaring:

"We are endeavoring to prevent fraud by the investigation now going forward. It is bound to be a tedious task and will take time to prepare and present our facts to the court."

The district attorney has 16 assistants and reports that he had gone to Harrisburg to ask for four deputy attorney generals to assist him in the election probe, Park said, were misunderstood. Park declared he had made plans for the work, but was not prepared to say what they were. His conference with the attorney general in Harrisburg had to do with cases now occupying the attention of his office, he said.

Park's office has been deluged with reports of alleged election frauds and other complaints. These it was said at his office are being investigated, but many are proving worthless. Facts, but not gossip, are invited, Park and his aides declare.

JUDGES' RACE IN DOUBT

The contest for the seventh Republican nomination for judge of Common Pleas Court remained in doubt in unofficial counts. Accurate returns on this contest are expected to come only with the completion of the tabulation at the returning board.

According to unofficial records Judge William H. McNaugher is leading Judge Joseph Stadtfeld for the seventh position with all but a few districts heard from. Attorney Joseph Bialas, who managed the campaign for the seven judges, said no complete accurate figures are available. The strength of Attorney Thomas M. Marshall, who ran ahead of both McNaugher and Stadtfeld, made it certain that one of the sitting judges will be defeated.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

ONCE MORE you may credit the energetic Mr. Holtz with a good yarn. This one concerns a Hebrew employer who sat in his office one early morning and considered the problems of the day. In walked one of his employes.

"Mr. Winterblotz," asserted the employe, "I have something on my mind and I consider it my duty to tell you about it at once."

"That's okay by me," he stated. "You can commence the conversation."

The employee hesitated.

"I don't know how to begin," he muttered, "but I guess that the fastest way is the best. You know Irving, who works in the cashier's cage with me? Well, for almost three months now he has been stealing on an average of $25 a week."

Mr. Winterblotz stiffened.

"Wot's that?" he cried. "You mean to sit there and tell me that Irving has been stealing from me? You are positive?"

"Absolutely," insisted the other man. "All you have to do is to look over his acounts. I know I'm not mistaken."

The boss banged the desk.

"Send him in to me at once," he ordered. "Right away."

A few minutes later in walked Irving. Mr. Winterblotz motioned to a chair.

"Sit down, Irving," he said. "I want to ask you something. How much salary are you making here?"

"Forty dollars a week," replied the cashier.

Mr. Winterblotz banged his desk.

"That's not enough," he stated. "From now on, you're making $75 a week."

The cashier looked incredulously at his employer, thanked him exceedingly and left. Outside he met the man who, unknown to him, had betrayed him.

"What do you think the old man wanted me for?" he asked excitedly. "He called me in and raised my salary to $75."

His false co-worker swallowed hard and marched into Mr. Winterblotz's office a second time.

"I can't understand this, Mr. Winterblotz," he cried. "I tell you that Irving is stealing money and you raise his salary. Don't you believe that I'm telling you the truth?"

The boss lit a cigar.

"Sure I believe you," he agreed. "But I'm the best one to run mine own business. And now that you're speaking this way, send back Irving to me again."

The other man shrugged his shoulders and did as he was told. Once more Irving sat down with his employer.

"Irving, my boy," said Mr. Winterblotz, "I've been thinking things over. How much did I tell you was to be your new salary?"

"Seventy-five dollars a week," was the hasty response.

"Well," the boss went on, "after due consideration, I have decided something else. You are not making $75 a week any longer. You are making $100 a week."

The cashier almost fell from his chair.

"That's wonderful of you, Mr. Winterblotz," he enthused. "You certainly are a grand employer. But would you mind telling me something? I've been working for you for five years at $40 a week. Why do you suddenly raise me to $100."

The boss flicked the ash from his cigar.

"Because, Irving," he murmured pleasantly, "when I fire you, it ain't gonna be from no $40 job. It's gonna be from a $100 job!"...

denying that Burke had arrested Sullivan, interjected:

"This man would have you thinking they were a lot of altar boys."

TOO DEEP FOR JUDGE

A majority of the defendants testified the trouble was over long before the police arrived.

Magistrate O'Connor said:

"This is too deep for me. There are too many conflicting stories. Let the court decide."

A crowd of 1,000 cheered or jeered as the prisoners were led out of the police station and taken to jail in the patrols. The district attorney will fix the bail, it was said.

Those held with Alderman Sullivan, according to police, were Harold Americus, 22, of 1720 Center avenue; Charles Porter, 24, of 3714 Mintwood street; Martin Grady, 58, of 617 Bellefonte street; Joseph Rosenberg, 32, of 3052 Phelan street; Vincent Cavanaugh, 27, of 336 Forty-fifth street; Charles Davis, 28, a Negro, of 3036 Mulberry way; Charles Winstel, 34, of 3645 Liberty avenue; William Morgan, 32, of 3424 Denny street; Charles Macidorci, 27, of Aspinwall; Albert Coleman, 50, of 1624 Center avenue; John McGuire, 42, of 3436 Penn avenue; Charles Kelly, 47, of 3608 Mintwood street; John Albacker, 38, of 300 North Beatty street; Regis Sullivan, 25, of 2708 Penn avenue; Mike Kelly, 45, of 3630½ Liberty avenue; Edward Stefanowicz, 22, of 2709 Spring way, and Thomas Hannon, 38, of 3816 Howley avenue.

SEA FLIERS FAIL TO FIND PLANE

S. S. STAVANGERFJORD, AT SEA.—(By Radio.)—Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The Stavangerfjord, with Willy Rody, Christian Johanssen and Fernando da Costa Viega, transatlantic airmen aboard, passed the scene of the fliers' rescue today, but failed to sight their wrecked plane.

The plane was thought to have sunk after the fliers, having clung to the wreckage for seven days, were picked up off the Newfoundland coast Monday. The spot where they were picked up is about 30 miles southeast of the regular steamship lane this season.

The fliers, who were transferred to this vessel yesterday from the motorship Belmoira, which rescued them, were doing well today.

LUCK -:- Sometimes It Leads To the Pawn Shop

Player Pawns Silver Tea Pot Every Winter; Fur Coat In the Summer

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Pyramid Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 23.

Connoisseur of hard luck tales is a certain pawnbroker who operates a shop near one of the larger studios. Many a time during this last hard summer, he has been approached with a pitiful keensake hardly worth the pledging.

Generally speaking, motion picture people redeem not more than 80 per cent of the articles they leave with him. Some, of course, are better risks.

Gilbert Roland

One extra girl, for instance, has been in four times with an old-fashioned brooch of grandmother's day. When she gets money she always returns for it. Another good risk is a character actress who pawns a silver tea pot every winter and a fur coat every summer. Cowboys also are likely to return for their boots and spurs. They are eager payers, too, when a member of their clan is unfortunate enough to lose his pledge. On one occasion when a particularly dear pair of boots was up for sale three cowhands rode in 20 miles to look them over.

An unusual pledge now held in this shop is a trio of old-fashioned stop watches brought in by an old man who used to train dogs for picture work. Dozens of college rings and fraternity pins are waiting in trays until the extras who own them can make a redemption.

Occasionally there comes along a souvenir pin, just enough to sell to tourists. One such was a cigaret lighter inscribed with the name of a fairly well-known actress. Originally it had been given to her by a picture executive. Then after they quarreled she had pawned it. A man from Illinois paid a handsome price for this memento of Hollywood.

THEY PROBABLY DIDN'T

If you ask how Gilbert Roland, a single, efficient person on his dear self, supports a budget to be made up his funeral.

In the time it was brought to him by an assistant.

With a sinking eye the expert checked the items. Finally he signed his name.

"There," he gasped. "And don't dare go a cent over it."

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Billy Rose is a new name in the directory of revue producers. First there was one Ziegfeld, then George White and then Earl Carroll. There should be room so everything will be even. Billy probably said to himself. Furthermore he said to New York so loudly that he was heard. His new revue with last season's name, "Crazy Quilt," will make its bow in the Alvin next week when those at Uncle Billy's quilting party will include such expert patch-workers as Fanny Brice, Phil Baker and Ted Healy. One may take up for this as early as tomorrow.

Lenore Ulric and Sidney Blackmer, who are matrimonially one and histrionically two, will get into The Social Register next week in the Nixon, the first of the theatrical year in that theater and the first in history for the play John Emerson and Anita Loos wrote it, except a song. "The Key to My Heart," which Miss Ulric will sing. The book is open.

Small Timer, harping on one string, says political "circles" is a word that refers to nothing straight.

George M. Young, new manager of the Alvin is making a personal appearance on the stage of his theater this wk. That sleek-looking gent with distinguished silvery hair and air of sang-froid, who between acts, makes announcement concerning the plans of The Professional Players, is he.

You have no idea the trouble we prominent men have without eyeplantation engineers to give press agents a shooty title. We assume that President Hoover and Andrew W. Brown may get good service, but we are not so fortunate. Six months or more ago we engaged Charles Danver, the columnist, as our personal publicity representative. And in six months we've got just one measly line. William J. Lewis, the drama critic, in a derby already? We are greatly disappointed.

WALTER WINCHELL
On Broadway

(Copyright, 1931, Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Imagine

Two columnists were chatting and their faces
Were wreathed in smiles that only pals can wear;
Their words were soft and tender as embraces—
And peace and friendship hovered in the air;
Said one: "I've read your stuff for years—I think you
Stand out alone among our gallant crowd;
In days to come biographers will link you
With Field and Taylor."—Then the other bowed
And murmured: "Well, if you crave my opinion—
The laurel wreath should grace your noble brow;
I hereby crown you king of our dominion,
Your patter, scoops and wit all rate a bow."

(They claim that dreams are fleeting as a shower—
But this one must have lasted me an hour!)

—Don Wahn.

Ouch!

Take it from Thomas Mitchell, star of "Cloudy With Showers." He recalls when David Belasco's "Kiki" opened, and the Old Man grumbled long and loud because a certain actor, to whom he had given plenty of jobs, had forgotten to send him a telegram wishing him good luck.

The actor's neglect seemed particularly unreasonable to Belasco, who chirped:

"That he should do such a thing to me! Can you imagine it? To me? Of course, everybody knows what an awful actor he is—but I am the only one who knows HOW awful he is!!"

Here's How

David Murray says you can always tell a poor relation. He only has one chin.

Heheheh

And Walter Buckley knows a feller who went to Yurrop and got so seasick that on the third day out he looked exactly like his passport photo.

A Blow to Eugenie

Blow, gay autumnal wind, from secret and snow-capped peaks,
Blow us an icy breath that bellows and screams and shrieks
Let summer's leaves and blossoms tumble and whirl like gnats,
And blow from thousands of heads those One-Eyed Connolly hats.

—Holger Lundbergh.

As If You Didn't Know

We all make mistakes, observes Norman S., that's why we have Broadway columns.

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for the best similes dictionary: Anon's: Hard to pick up as an oyster on a marble floor...John Harrower's: Plentiful as the I's in a film actor's conversation...Ted Cook's: Tired as you feel after reading an article on the virtues of exercise...Bugs Baer's: A voice that sounds like a beached whale...L. A. Wilkinson's: Wrong as economists.

Nifties

Charles Washburn: "I thought up a clever crack, listen: The hardest part of any job is holding it."

George M. Cohan: "Substitute 'gesting' for 'holding.'"

A Form of Criticism

Tom J. Gerahty, Jack Gilbert, the movie star, and two others were playing contract bridge with no options. Gilbert hadn't read Culbertson, but was seeped and soaked with Dr. Work's books and today's Best Bets. Gilbert kept quoting Dr. Work—"Work says this," and "Work says that," all of which help up the game.

To which an irritated opponent groaned: "C'mon, play, play! Cut that Dr. Work stuff!" and one of Gilbert's stoogs niftied: "Yeh. All Work and no play makes Jack a pediculous partner."

Newspaperman Stuff

Dick LaMarr, one of the better booking agents, forwards this one. It happened at a banquet to a renowned bankers and one of the so-called better reporters was assigned to the affair. The guest of honor fell dead while making a speech and every paper in town got the story but the dining reporter's rag.

"You dope!" screamed his editor later, "everybody scooped us and you were there! Why didn't you tell us about his death?"

"Because," pouted the scribe, "it marred the proceedings."

He's Touchy Like That

It was directly after our first national broadcast from the WABC studios the other Tuesday.

"If you don't mind," said That Winchell Person, "I wish you wouldn't refer to me as 'America's Greatest Gossip.'"

"Why not?" asked the Man in Charge.

"Because all the other gossips might be offended," was the reply. "Why not just call me 'Gossip's Greatest American?'"

Wallingford Returns to Screen

By REGINA CREWE

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—"The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford!"

There's a picture title to gladden the hearts of movier-goers! For who doesn't recall with glee that delightful scamp, J. Rufus Wallingford, created by the late George Randolph Chester to amuse millions of Cosmopolitan Magazine readers!

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has achieved a coup in revivifying J. Rufus through it's brand-new comedy soon to reach the screens as "The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

William Haines is the happy selection as the Wallingford of the new adventures while Get-Rich-Quick's notorious henchman, Blackie Daw, is to be portrayed by Ernest Torrence.

And to make it complete, Jimmy Durante, Broadway's latest contribution to Hollywood's "sensations," makes his appearance as a new and delightful character created for, by and with the far-famed Durante.

"The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is scheduled as one of the first important fall releases of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It has been previewed in Hollywood, where it has been termed one of the "Cleverest and most rapidly paced laugh-getters ever turned out."

The coast critics call it a "record-breaking comedy hit," stating that it "covers itself with glory," that there's "never a dull moment" in this "real entertainment." They add that Bill Haines, at last, has a "thoroughly likeable role" and that "Schnozzle" Durante is a "wow." And there is praise, too, for Leila Hyams, Guy Kibbee, Henry Armetta, Ernest Torrence and the other big names in the case.

So here are congratulations to the picture patrons, and a gesture of gratitude to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for bringing J. Rufus back to us in "The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford!"

Different Opinions Expressed In Hideous Question

Listen, Bill.

Suppose you were out in a boat with your mother and wife.

And the boat began to sink.

Which would you save? Mamma, or the Missis?

You've heard that before? Of course you have. It's the oldest gag on earth, so old that you'd never expect it to cause a ripple in 1931. Yet someone tossed it into the column recently, and the war has been on ever since.

How many family rows did that innocent question start? Only the neighbors know. Here today are a few of the echoes.

Almira, for instance. If Almira were a man, she would save Mamma. Why? Give you three guesses!

WOULD SAVE MOTHER

"Dear Sally:

"After reading that argument about whether a man should save his wife or his mother from the sinking boat, I asked my husband which he would save. He said, 'Why ask me a terrible question like that?' I don't know what I would do, which, after all, is rather true.

"So I turned the riddle around. I said, 'Suppose I were in a boat with my husband and mother—which would I save?' I decided that I would save my mother, of course—for everyone's first duty is to his or her mother.

"I would want to save my husband, of course, but that would be pure selfishness. And neither my husband nor I could ever be happy again, if I did, because there would always be a ghost between us . . . the ghost of my mother whom I had deliberately sacrificed through my selfishness.

"On the other hand, if I saved my mother, and let my husband drown, of course I would be broken-hearted. But at least my conscience would be clear, and there would be no ghost to haunt my dreams. I would be the only one to be unhappy, instead of two of us, as would be the case if I saved him and let her drown.

"ALMIRA."

MOTHER'S OPINION

Well, maybe, sister. Maybe. But it seems to me that you're overlooking the Big Boys' one in your calculations. How about his right to live? How about saving him—not for your own happiness but for his?

And why shouldn't a sacrificed husband's ghost be just as pitiful as a sacrificed mother's?

Reasoning like yours, Almira, makes lovely poetry . . . but it also makes many a broken home.

Now comes Mamma—to speak for herself. Who should be saved in that sinking boat? Listen.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I read Florence's letter about her quarrel with her husband, Jim, over who should be saved—wife or mother.

"And I know that if I were in his mother's place, I would rather see him save his wife than to be saved at her expense.

"And I am not saying that because I am a young wife who wants to be first. I am an old lady, the mother of both boys and girls who are married, and I know that true mother love would see the wife saved.

"When Florence is a mother herself, she will know what I mean. But meantime, she should snap out of it, and not be jealous of Jim's mother. And Jim's mother shouldn't be jealous of her, either. Because a boy's love for his mother and his wife are two different kinds of love. You love your child with one kind of love, and your husband with another kind. And that goes for mothers and wives, too. And neither one should feel that the other interferes, nor try to interfere with the other.

ANOTHER IDEA

"Of course I know that some folks do try to interfere, both mothers and wives. But when they do, they're being silly, and should snap out of it. They each have their place in the happiness of the son or daughter, and they should realize that and not spoil that happiness with foolish and cruel jealousy and squabbling.

"MRS. ADELE GORDON."

Sounds fair, doesn't it? And it is fair. A man's wife and his mother do have different places in his life, and great gobs of misery and grief could be staved off if Mamma and the little woman could just realize it and stop reach-Cain each trying to be the sour big nose with him.

In spite of which, here's a laddy buck who insists Mamma should come first, regardless. Do you agree with him?

Dear Miss Martin:

So Florence is all hot and bothered, is she, because Jim thinks his mother should come first? Well, she is wrong and Jim is right. He should save his mother.

"Mothers should always come first. His mother would die for him, and he would do the same for her. So he should always consider her first.

"I am married and I love my wife, but I wouldn't sacrifice my mother for her. And she agrees that I am right, too.

"BOB."

Young Men Are More Tactful Than Young Women, Fay King's Opinion

ISN'T SHE GORGEOUS?
I CAN'T HAND HER MUCH!
YES, HE'S A FINE FELLOW!
HE'S PERFECTLY ADORABLE!
REALLY! SHE NEVER IMPRESSED ME AS BEING SO CLEVER!
FAY KING

By FAY KING.

It seems to me that young men are more tactful than young women.

It is not at all unusual to hear a girl rave over her favorite screen hero to her escort, or tell endlessly of the attentions of some other admirer.

Yet if the screen star happens to be a famous siren and his girl asked him if he thinks she is "perfectly fascinating" regardless of what he really thinks he will say that he "don't think she's so much."

Few girls would listen without protest to praise of some other girl.

Yet a young man will even add a good word for the other fellow.

He doesn't tell her he doesn't like her hat, but she hawls him out about his tie.

Katherine Seeks Madge's Advice

At Katherine's faltering question as to what I thought of the venomous letter which she had just given me to read, I crumpled it savagely and threw it with all my strength across the veranda. It struck the wall and came back, falling almost at her feet. A bitter little wraith of a smile touched her lips as she stooped and picked it up.

"You see," she said, "it comes back to me."

"Give it to me," I ordered, taking it from her and smoothing it out. It was the height of absurdity for me to do that, of course, but the unadulterated brazenness and rattlesnake poison of this thing made me see red for a minute. But of course we will have to keep this for Jack to read."

She gave a little cry and bent forward, her hand stretched out in protest.

"Oh, no, no!" she exclaimed. "He never must, Madge. I—I could not bear it. Don't you see what she says that if I said anything, he would think himself duty bound—do you think I want him for a single instant if he is tired of me?"

The color was in her cheeks now, plenty of it, whipped there by her humiliation, and her eyes were lovely in their defiance shadowed by their pain. With the odd impulse that sometimes comes to one in moments of stress, I wished that both her husband and Hal Meredith, the man who had loved her so long and so hopelessly, could see her in this tragic moment which had given her an almost startling loveliness.

"How do you know Jack is tired of you?" I asked slowly, meaningly.

She raised her head as if someone had flicked her with a whip lash, and looked at me with startled eyes.

"Why, why!" she faltered, pointing to the letter in my lap. "She says so."

"Yes, I am aware that she does," I said drily. "But I do not know why you, a normally sensible woman of keen perceptions, should take her word for it."

Katherine was silent for a long minute, her eyes looking out over the veranda rail to the horizon framed by its post. Then she turned back to me with steady gaze locking mine.

"Because," she said bravely, and I guessed what bringing this secret bitterness into the open was costing her, "because, Madge, I've been fearing this for a long time. I haven't had but one letter from Jack in a year, you know, and although the mail service there is very irregular, yet it is not as bad as that would indicate. And in that letter he spoke of this woman, his associate's sister, as being wonderful in wilderness life, said she could make the most uncomfortable place homelike. I've never seen her, but I've heard that about her, too."

"Yes, so have I," I assented. "She's been so wonderful in wilderness life that she's broken up two or three homes of men who have been thrown with her in the wilderness. But that sets no precedent for her breaking up yours, although I will admit she's had all the cards in her hand so far. But she's thrown a valuable trump away this deal." I picked up the letter and shook it above my head—one that I think will lose the game for her.

"I'm not playing any game with my husband's love as the stake," Katherine said, stubbornly, her lips compressing tightly upon the words.

"Of course, you're not." I assented quickly. "Neither would I in your place. But suppose it was not his love for you that was at question, but his happiness, and the game was what the gamblers call a crooked one with the cards all stacked against you, would you stand watching it, and make no effort to straighten things out?"

"Suppose, on the contrary," Katherine said quietly, "that my intuition bears out this woman's words. I have feared for years that I was not Jack's true mate. Remember, dear—forgive me for bringing this up, but I must now, and then we'll never speak of it again—but he only married me in the rebound—as it were—from his hurt when he came back, and learned of your marriage to Dicky."

For a startled second I stared at her with wide eyes. Those days of my honeymoon when my brother-cousin had gone to the French army because he had come back from South America to find me married, seemed like the intangible memories of another life. Had Jack Bickett ever been idiot enough—I bent toward Katherine and spoke sharply.

"Did Jack tell you that he married you because he could not marry me?"

"No—o," she admitted, "he never said that." I purposely interrupted her with a scornful little laugh.

"You are a living illustration of a pet theory of mine," I said, "that when a brainy, poised woman starts out to make an unmitigated idiot of herself, she has all the feminine morons licked to a frazzle," as Dicky would say."

"Do you mean?" she said, with a betraying little catch of the breath, "that losing you had nothing to do with his marrying me, that it wasn't because he didn't want to come back to meet you and your husband without being definitely betrothed to someone?"

Household Hints

Wash parsley in hot water instead of cold and it will be easier to cut.

To clean ebony piano keys, rub with a warm flannel over which a little pure salad oil has been sprinkled. Polish with a chamois.

When nails or screws need to be driven into hard wood, rub them with soap or oil. They will go in much more easily and are less likely to split the wood.

As often as anyone is put on a liquid diet in our house, a little lime water goes into each glass of milk served them. It helps in the digestive process and sweetens the stomach.

-:- The Beauty Box -:-

By HELEN FOLLETT

Let no gal despair because she doesn't measure up to the ideal figure. There are no standards; can't be. There are plump darlings with pretty figures; tall, lily-like beauties who are no strain on the optic organization. There are slim Sallies who, though underweight and almost scrawny, qualify because they carry themselves beautifully and appreciate the value of graceful movement. Even a stolidly-built woman with wide shoulders and fair-sized hips may not have a grievance; she may possess a certain anatomical grandeur which isn't to be despised.

You can't make Mrs. Chinchin believe that beauty troubles are only in your eye. She has two definite ones on her face, the chin that belongs there and the chin that doesn't. She hates her pelican pouch and justly. But she can roll into one if she will work diligently, persistently. She needs only to roll the flesh between finger and thumb, first anointing with a massage cream. After five minutes of rolling, let her lay on a bit of gauze that has been dipped in witch hazel, after which she must do a little facial refrigerating with a piece of ice.

It is a good idea to brush brain fur the wrong way. Begin at the nape of the neck and curry toward the forehead. Part at various places, lift the hair up away from the head, strand by strand, brush briskly. Some time back, a specialist of note suggested pulling the hair to make it grow, taking a tuft and jerking gently, the notion being that this method of hair exercise increased the circulation in the papilla, that little cuplike arrangement in which each individual hair rests and has its being. No harm trying. Finish up with brisk friction of the scalp.

'Neuralgia' a Malady Known to Middle Ages

There is an uncomfortable human ailment known as "trigeminal neuralgia." The pain associated with it is always described as "almost unbearable." Really it is more painful than any toothache or headache.

Dr. Copeland

The disease is a neuralgia of the face. Sometimes it's chief symptom is called "earache pain." Its name was given it because the nerves involved are the trigeminal nerves, as the scientists call them.

There are two of these trigeminal nerves, one on each side of the face. In the course of each is a knot of nerve tissue called a ganglion. Most of the authorities regard this ganglion as the seat of the inflammation or disturbance, whatever it is, that causes the pain.

This disease has been recognized for hundreds of years. The French used to call it "tic douloureux." Translated, this means "agonizing twitch." It is indeed just that—a tormenting, excruciatingly painful, spasmodic ailment.

In the seventeenth century there lived an English judge, Judge Jeffreys. This man was known as "Bloody Jeffreys" because of the severe sentences he imposed. It is recorded that he sent hundreds of men and women to the gallows. It is believed he meted out these terrible punishments because of his sufferings from trigeminal neuralgia. He was in constant pain and consequently in a rage of spirit practically every minute of his life.

At times the pain in this disease may be steady in the nature of a bearable dull ache. This alternates with intermittent paroxysms of severe agonizing spells. Each quiet period is speedily followed by an attack of greater intensity.

One of the modern methods of treatment is the injection of alcohol or some other drug directly into the ganglion. The medicine deadens the nerve so that it carries no messages of pain to the brain.

Of course, there are various remedies and local applications, one of which may give relief. Your doctor will tell you about this. Hot applications, moist or dry, may help to lessen the pain.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Presenting the Bride in Marriage

Dear Miss Beeckman:

I am a girl 20 years of age and I am about to be married. I would like to know if it would be proper to have a younger brother, 16 years old, give me in marriage at a church wedding. If this is not good taste, would it be proper for an uncle of my fiance to give me in marriage, or perhaps a very close friend? X Y Z.

If the young gentleman of 16 is your only brother, I strongly advise that you give him the honor of presenting you in marriage. That is, if your father is not living, or is not to be at the wedding.

I went to a wedding the other day, at which the bride was about your age, and her brother of 15 gave her in marriage. It was very appealing, for he is a young gentleman of great dignity, and he performed his part in the service with a most effective realization of how important and dignified it should be.

Daughter's Company

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please say what your ideas are about a girl's mother remaining in the living-room while her daughter has company. The girl is 16. Is it proper for the mother to remain during the whole visit? The company consists of two young men and another young girl. B. C.

My idea is that it is gracious and hospitable for the mother to welcome the guests when they arrive, and after a few minutes to leave them to chat together. If she wishes to, she might go into the room for another few minutes during their visit, not in the spirit of spying or for any other disagreeable reason, but to radiate the spirit of her welcome. Then, too, she may say good-by to them as they are leaving. But I see no reason why she should remain in the room during the entire time, unless there really is a reason that she knows.

The investigation of alleged tampering with voting machines at the primary election yesterday apparently turned to expert metal research upon the pins declared to have been filed.

Late in the afternoon, Wallabald Trinks, professor at Carnegie Institute of Technology and an expert on metallurgy, was closeted for a long time with Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk, in charge of the investigation. The voting machine levers with the damaged pins which were turned over to the District Attorney, Andrew T. Park, were also taken into the room.

With Judge James R. Macfarlane presiding, the Recount Board was at work today recounting votes cast in 21 election districts following granting of petitions for the tabulation presented by Charles C. McGovern and Joseph G. Armstrong, both of whom claim one of the two Republican nominations for County Commissioner.

County Solicitor M. B. Lesher, representing Armstrong, filed the petition to have four additional ballot boxes opened and the votes recounted late yesterday.

These districts are Fourth District of the Eleventh Ward and Fourteenth, Seventeenth, and Twenty-fourth Districts of the Fourteenth Ward, Pittsburgh.

Judge Macfarlane refused to say what his method of procedure will be in carrying out the recount, although it was intimated that votes cast in the entire election will be recounted. Commissioner McGovern suggested that just the votes cast for County Commissioner be counted.

Vote Machine Man To Fight Extradition

County Detective Michael McDermott will leave Pittsburgh Sunday for Baltimore to represent Allegheny County authorities at an extradition hearing at which this county seeks the extradition from Baltimore of Edward L. Funk, alleged to have tampered with voting machines at the primary election September 15. He was discharged recently by the Poole Engineering and Machine Company as a result of charges that he was responsible for failure of the machines to work.

Chief George W. Murren of the county detectives, yesterday filed papers with Gov. Pinchot asking an extradition request. Murren has learned, he said, that Funk will fight the move to bring him back to Pittsburgh.

Order Post Mortem In Mystery Death

A post-mortem examination was to be made today to determine the cause of death of Thomas Eagan, 55, no home, in Montefiore Hospital early today. Eagan was taken to the hospital after he had complained to Abe Reim, storekeeper at 2217 Forbes street, that he was ill. The body bore no marks, except a few back bruises, which morgue attaches say were not sufficient to cause death.

A group of Pittsburgh society folks who have always been patrons of the arts were among the guests at the dinner given last night in the Fox Chapel Golf Club in honor of the Jury of Award for the thirteenth International Art Exhibit.

And many attended the tea given yesterday afternoon by the Albert C. Lehmans in their home in the Schenley Apartments.

Before I tell you who the Pittsburgh guests were at the dinner, I want to mention again the members of the jury of award who were guests of honor—Henri Eugene Le Sidaner, Paul Nash, Carlo Orano, Effisio Oppo, Jonas Lie, Randall Davey, Eugene Speicher, Ernest Blumenschein and Charles Rosen.

Others at the dinner were Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of the Department of Fine Arts of Carnegie Institute, and Mrs. Saint-Gaudens; Edward Duff Balken, Mrs. Leslie M. Johnston, John O'Connor Jr., Mrs. J. B. Thomas, Guillaume LeRolle, Mrs. Heinz Langer, Miss Elizabeth Demarest, Mrs. Douglas Stewart and Mrs. H. C. Bughman Jr.

Also attending the dinner were Mrs. David Lindsay Gillespie, Miss Mabel Lindsay Gillespie, Mrs. J. Dawson Ogilvy, Mrs. James D. Hallman, the George E. Shaws, the Taylor Allderdices, W. S. Arbuthnot, Mrs. Clinton Childs, the Samuel H. Churches, the George H. Clapps and Howard Heinz.

Mrs. William Terrell Johnston was a guest and so were the A. Neil C. Lehmans, the John L. Porters, the William Watson Smiths, the Roy A. Hunts, the Augustus K. Olivers, Dr. Andrey Avinoff, Mrs. Mary Callery, Courtlandt Baker, Dr. Thomas S. Baker, Mrs. William M. Hall, Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Holland, George W. Crawford and Mrs. Stewart Johnston.

The three European artists, Sidaner, Nash and Oppo, with Mr. Saint-Gaudens and Mr. LeRolle, left this morning for Washington, Philadelphia and New York. In Washington they'll be entertained at luncheon by Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury.

The time is approaching for first meetings now that cooler breezes are promised and folks are coming back to town. And among the first gatherings of autumn will be different girls' schools.

Meetings Planned

The Opera club has set Wednesday, October 14, as the date for an initial fall gathering. There'll be a luncheon that day at 1 o'clock in the Edgeworth Club, Sewickley. Miss Agate Brown, of Sewickley, is president of the Ogontz Alumnae group, by the way.

Outstanding Speakers to Cover Wide Range of Subjects in Monday Morning Talks

Always of more than ordinary interest is news of the Monday morning lectures at the Twentieth Century Club. A wide range of subjects will be covered by the outstanding speakers whom Mrs. Carroll Miller and her lecture committee have procured for the season. The season proper opens with the president's reception, in horor of Mrs. Charles S. Shoemaker, on October 29, the lecture season beginning on November 9 with Mrs. Cecil Barnes as the speaker. Her subject is "First Steps in Fiction." Next comes a favorite of many years' standing, Dr. William Starr Meyers, of Princeton, whose political current events talks are always among the most largely attended of the entire season. Dr. Thomas S. Arbuthnot's illustrated talk on Africa is another November attraction.

December's speakers are Gov. Wilbur C. Cross, of Connecticut, who will have "The Contemporary British Novel" as his subject; John Mason Brown, the dramatic critic, and Mme. Clara Clemens, who will reminisce about her famous father, Mark Twain. In January will come Dr. Robert Andrew Millikan to talk on "The March of Science"; Sir Norman Angell with "The Crisis in Democracy" as his topic; Dr. Meyers again and, on the twenty-fifth, George Pierce Baker, head of Yale's drama school to talk on "Drama as a Social Force."

February Speaker

Dr. Amos Squire, physician at Sing Sing, will address the members on February 1. Prof. William Z. Ripley, of Harvard, has been asked to give a talk on economics, with especial reference to the present depression. He will be here on the fifteenth of the month.

The twenty-second will bring Cornelia Sorabji to talk of her native land, India. She is the daughter of the Rev. Kharsedji Sorabji, of the Bombay presidency, is a leader in the feminist movement in India and is the first woman lawyer, English or Indian, to plead in a British court. David Seabury, speaking on "The Riddle of Human Relations," is February's concluding speaker.

Prof. Hugh Mearns, who will talk on "Unguessed Gifts"; S. K. Ratcliffe, with "Whither America?—an English Guess" as his subject; Dr. Henry Seidel Canby and Maurice Hindus comprise March's list. Only one speaker is as yet booked for April, Miss Eleanor Markell, who will talk on "New Trends in English Fiction" on the fourth of the month. The annual meeting on the twenty-fifth will close the season.

MANY BEAUTIFUL AUTUMN FROCKS ARE ULTRA—MODERN

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Don't look for dates—of a chronological kind—in the best of the new season's new frocks. Many clever frocks are ultra-modern, quite obviously of this day and age and more charming for certain women than any frock that ever borrowed a ruching, a puffed sleeve or a bustle from any fashions of long ago. This is not to say, of course, that there are not charming and most attractive period frocks, but simply that the clothes that are individual without any borrowings from the past, seem far more attuned for very modern types. The wise woman looks for modernity in the majority of her clothes, especially if her dress budget is restricted. Experiments and quaint clothes are all very nice when one can order clothes at will and wear them merely a few times. But the women who has to build up her wardrobe carefully, correlating her frocks, coats and accessories, should refrain from clothes that are of the period type. They will soon be "dated" in more senses than one.

SHOWN TODAY are two frocks that are ultra-modern and ultra-charming. The first is a model by Lenief and incorporates several details that will be current this winter. These include the wide shoulder treatment and the extremely wide belt. Another interesting detail is the triangular shoulder scarf attached at one side of the corsage in front and worn either tossed over the shoulder, as shown in the drawing, or hanging down in back like a loose panel. The material is heavy black crepe.

* * *

ANOTHER NEW frock—in the best sense of the word—is the Molyneux model. It is of chiffon in seven subtle tones of blue from palest pastel to deep ultramarine. The jagged edges that make the jointure of the different sections are worked by hand in a close over and over embroidery stitch. The little cape is separate.

BRIDE, 15, NEW HUSBAND HELD

Frank W. Calvert, 37, of 222 Sandusky street, who, police say, was married yesterday to Miss Virginia Osborne, 15, of 222 Goodrich street, following an elopement to Wellsburg, W. Va., was held for court on a charge of enticing a minor by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court. The child-bride was turned over to Social Service workers.

The couple was arrested early today at Calvert's home in Sandusky street on complaint of Mrs. Ellen Osborne, foster mother of the girl, to whom the bride, had sent a telegram late yesterday announcing her marriage. Mrs. Osborne said Virginia was given in to her custody when she was a week old and that she would celebrate her 16th birthday next week. Admitting the marriage, Calvert testified he believed the girl was 17. At the Marriage License Bureau it was testified Virginia gave her age as 22.

Another witness was Katherine Calvert, 34, mother of a child, 17, who declared that she had lived with Calvert for 14 years. She said Calvert was the father of her child.

The father visited Mrs. Cable last Friday and asked permission to take his son out for an airing. They never returned, and Mrs. Cable said she believes they have gone to Brilliant, O., his former home. She plans to go there today in an effort to recover her son.

Missing since Sunday when he started home from the movies in Schenley Park, Henry Wasensky, 10, of 3546 Fleetwood street, is believed to have been kidnaped, according to his father, Stanley, who asked Missing Person Bureau police to search for him.

HONOR WIRELESS HERO -:- Olive Palmer to Sing Autumn Numbers -:- AIR MAIL ANNIVERSARY

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

Darrell V. Martin

In far away Gothenburg, Sweden, Land of the Midnight Sun, among wireless operators, Radio Jack, is the prospect of a bed tonight. Yesterday (Sept. 22) Jack Irving Morris, a Pittsburgh boy, attended the presentation of a gold medal to one of the most daring rescuers in the annals of radio's assistance to the disaster at sea. Mr. Morris is employed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. at its East Pittsburgh plant. KDKA, which employs Mr. Morris, announced that Larson, who had undergone many operations, was unable to accept the medal in person, and that the award presentation would be made in Gothenburg.

THE BURNING AT sea of the tanker Castor a year and last April brought forth perhaps the greatest display of radio heroism on record. . . . the Castor was about 300 miles west of the Azores when fire was discovered . . . the dangerous nature of the cargo made it a hopeless fight but the crew manned the hose and midst scorching flames battled desperately in an effort to extinguish the fire. A Swedish youth, Fritz Larson, kept pounding his key for aid down in the wireless room . . . wind carried the intense heat and smoke into the small compartment but he bound a wet towel around his head and kept pounding out the life message of the sea, SOS . . . explosions shook the tanker finally the captain ordered the crew to "abandon ship" . . . boats were lowered. Larson was missing . . . they found him half-conscious in the wireless room . . . they dragged him to safety . . . Larson protesting that he had been unable to make sure that the rescue boats had understood his message, begged to be allowed to stay at his post, but was refused . . . a shift in the wind cleared the forward part of the burning vessel and Larson returned to the flaming ship in an effort to get a confirmation that his SOS had been heard . . . He had hardly resumed the key when an explosion blew up the aft deck and the flames rushed forward . . . to those in the boats it appeared that he was lost . . . suddenly out of the black smoke Larson was seen to stagger, and reaching the rail, plunge into the sea . . . he was picked up unconscious, terribly burned, but he had got over his message and the British steamship Ausbridge rescued the crew a few hours later.

What Russ Wants:

Girls have asked us so much about Russ Columbo, NBC's valentine, that we asked Russ for his definition of the ideal girl. Writes Russ:

"My ideal girl hasto be intelligent, a good sport and be possessed of an infinite sweetness. She also must be interested in music. Romance? I love it."

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—There is a nervous hysteria in the radio camps. Moguls of the microphone, their eyes on contented listeners, are arranging their football schedules.

Nothing so harrasses the microphone men as a football schedule which will bring satisfaction to 75 per cent of the nation's armchairs. In late years what is one listener's Yale is another's yawn. And the broadcasters can't afford to inspire yawns when sports contests are being aired.

Columbia recently threw gridiron tradition into the alley, booked teams which have acquired the habit of victory, paid little attention to the so-called Big Three. Its poohbahs hope they have not erred, hope that the teams they list will live up to their reputations. But what if Notre Dame and Army prove to be duds? What if Princeton, most microphonically slighted of all big names, happens to produce a championship outfit?

N. B. C., a little more cautious, assigned the nasty job of picking its gridiron broadcasts to sports experts throughout the country and the various stations associated with its networks.

Athlete's Foot Is No Joke
Look Out You Haven't Got It!

You can't be too careful when you go to the beach or swimming pool these days that you don't catch Athlete's Foot.

(Or that some other member of the family doesn't bring it home to you).

It's nothing to laugh about. If it gets going good it can put you pretty thoroughly out of business — as ten million luckless Americans can tell you.

The first sign of it—as you have probably heard by this time—comes between your toes. Look out for itching, burning, cracks, blisters and dead-white, moist patches of skin.

If you don't get right after the infection, it spreads to the soles of your feet and other parts of the body, and then your troubles begin.

Go after it with Moone's Emerald Oil. An 85c bottle will clean it up in a couple of weeks or money back. All first-class druggists in America sell it on that basis.

Oil City Man Makes Plea For Allegheny River Link; Rodgers Named Treasurer

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board of Pennsylvania announced today that it had authorized a new survey of the waterway outlet from Pennsylvania to the Great Lakes via the Beaver River through Youngstown to Ashtabula, known as Route No. 1. It will be made by the Randolph Perkins Company of Chicago. The work will be finished in time for a report to Congress when it convenes in December. Col. Robert Isham Randolph, representing the company, told the board.

ASHTABULA ROUTE FAVORED

The board at the same time declared its position as to the routes for the improvements was unequivocably in favor of Route No. 1, via the Beaver, Mahoning and Shenango Rivers to a point on Lake Erie near Ashtabula, both by reason of the Act of Assembly creating the board and the personal commitments of the members. This position was defined in response to questions of L. H. Gavin, secretary of the Oil City Chamber of Commerce, recently appointed to the board by Gov. Pinchot.

Attorney John B. Eichenauer, member of the board, ruled that the board could not consider any other routes but the Ashtabula one, by reason of the acts of 1913 and 1915 which created the board. The acts specifically provide for promotion of that route, he declared.

PROTESTS PREDICTED

Gavin declared that he was representing the people of the Upper Allegheny Valley and that he was for the French Creek route for an outlet to the lakes. He said that in his belief Pittsburgh steel interests would block any efforts for waterway improvements which would give Youngstown the advantage of cheap coal by river transportation.

Capt. Rodgers was appointed treasurer of the Board, which recently was given an appropriation of $15,000 by County Commissioners, which is expected to be duplicated by the city.

Staley told the board that an increased appropriation from the Commonwealth was a strong probability in the next session of the Legislature depending on the advancement of the work of the board by that time. He asserted that the Governor was greatly interested in the promotion of the project.

DELAY DISCUSSION

KITTANNING, Pa., Sept. 23.—(INS)—Discussion of the proposed Pittsburgh to Lake Erie canal has been dropped from the program of the meeting and observation trip of the Allegheny River Improvement Association tomorrow, J. Frank Tilley, of Pittsburgh, secretary, announced today. Exclusion of the canal discussion was decided upon because two other organizations will join in the meeting tomorrow. The Kiskiminetas and Conemaugh Rivers Improvement Association and the Upper Allegheny Association, which will join the Allegheny group in its trip by boat from Freeport to Kittanning.

Congressman N. L. Strong will speak to the three associations.

Gang War Launched Over Duffy Rackets

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 23.—(INS.)—The drastic move of rival gangs for control of the late Mickey Duffy's rackets has started, police believed today, after identification of the bullet-riddled body of a man found near Swedesboro, N. J., yesterday as Joseph (Big Lally) Wlaigovitz, who is said to have been an enemy of Duffy, the slain beer baron.

SCOUT LEADERS HEAR ROBERTS

With Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, as honor guest, the annual banquet of Region Three, Boy Scouts of America, tonight at 7 o'clock will top the eleventh annual regional convention. The jurist is expected to talk of problems in training boys for citizenship.

A talk on "Organizing to Meet Today's Challenge," by Arthur A. Schuck, director of the division of operations, was another highlight of the day's program. Schuck was to discuss methods of dealing with changing conditions in scout work.

The convention opened yesterday with the keynote address by Dr. H. W. Hurt, director of younger boy research, in the place of Chief James E. West, whose illness prevented his attendance. Hurt expressed the business of the convention as being the devising of means to lengthen the period of the scout's influence over members.

$15,000 VOTED TO FIGHT FIRE

An additional appropriation of $15,000 to extinguish a mine fire burning for years on the McShane property, Twenty-eighth Ward, between the city and Crafton borough lines, was authorized by Council's finance committee yesterday.

The newly authorized sum brings the total appropriation to extinguish the fire to $41,000. Crafton borough is assisting in defraying the cost.

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang told Council he was sure no more money would be needed if the new appropriation was authorized.

Other speakers will be Dr. R. H. Huggins, dean of the university medical school, and Dr. Joseph H. Barach, special director of the clinic.

The Pitt medical school will entertain the board of the Allegheny County Medical Association at a dinner in the evening. Honor guests will be Dr. Willard J. Stone, of Pasadena, and Dr. Alfred Stengel, of Philadelphia.

SCHOOL PUPILS TO AID CANNING

Children of the public schools may voluntarily contribute pennies toward purchase of 250,000 pounds of sugar to be used in the canning of fruits by the Committee on Surplus for Needy, the Board of Public Education ruled yesterday.

Mrs. Ewing Laporte, member of the committee, sought permission of the board to ask the children to contribute toward a $15,000 fund for the sugar.

GRAHAM LEADS WORK

Marcus Aaron, president of the board, pointed out that no compulsion could be used, and the board appointed Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, to direct the collection through the school principals.

An appeal for produce from farmers within a 60-mile radius of the city was being pushed today by members of the state police and highway patrol, at the request of Gov. Pinchot, as canning in the Spring Garden avenue factory of the Surplus for the Needy Committee was being continued.

CANS RECEIVED

The women's committee, under the leadership of Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., met yesterday in the Civic Club rooms and voted to support the committee in a renewed effort. The first shipment of a consignment of 250,000 cans has been received by the committee.

The cannery, under the direction of expert canners loaned by canning companies of the district, is running full time and distribution of the products will begin to needy families when cold weather arrives, according to Attorney Harry I. Miller, chairman and organizer of the project.

Mrs. Owen to Seek House Re-Election

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen announced her candidacy for re-election as a Representative in Congress from the Fourth Florida District. Mrs. Owens is a daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan.

Restaurant Owners Plan Organization

Pittsburgh restaurant owners and managers will meet tomorrow in William Penn Hotel to further plans for the organization of the proposed Restaurant Association of Pittsburgh. Officers of the proposed association were nominated at a meeting in the Pittsburgher Hotel Monday.

BOARD MEMBER RAPS INJUSTICE TO TAXPAYER

Dr. Lewis Urges Budget Cut; Hays Classes to Resume; Low Wage Rate Scored

Steps to have a law passed preventing the annexation of territory to the city where the schools are in a run-down condition and impose extreme burdens on Pittsburgh taxpayers were urged yesterday by Dr. A. L. Lewin, member of the Board of Public Education, at the first regular meeting of the school year.

Dr. Lewin likewise urged "most thorough" treatment of the school budget this year with the hopes of reducing the school tax.

HAYS SCHOOL REOPENED

These, the settling of the Hays borough protest situation by reopening upper grades of the Hays School, and a protest by Philip Murray against the 33 cent an hour rate for women janitors, were the highlights of the meeting.

Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, recommended that the Hays School be reopened for the seventh and eighth grades, so that the children in these grades need not go to the Gladstone School in Hazelwood where they would have to pay part of their car fare.

Dr. Lewin's protest over the annexation of the poor school districts grew out of the "New Homestead" annexation, where the board had to erect a new building.

POLITICAL MOTIVE SEEN

Attorney J. Rodgers McCreery said:

"There is a new act which partially discourages this. But anyhow, I think the brakes have been put on these things in Council since the last election. One was annexed for political purposes, and it couldn't have been blocked in Council."

It was believed that the "New Homestead" area, annexed to the Thirty-first Ward, was meant.

Dr. Lewin added:

"And while considering the penalty imposed in this way upon Pittsburgh taxpayers, who have enough to do to keep their own schools going, I would like to suggest to the Finance Committee that it study the new budget more thoroughly at this time than ever before to see if something cannot be done to relieve the taxpayers."

LOW WAGE PROTESTED

Murray protested the low wage of "33 cents an hour for janitresses" after James Bonar said it was the school policy. He was joined by Mrs. F. B. Chalfant, who said that a domestic got $3 a day, carfare and two meals. Janitors get $5 a day in the school code. It was explained by Bonar, head of buildings, that the janitresses involved were getting an increase over their previous wages.

Many a Slip Between Lip And Service

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

What can we do about the present situation?

We can talk.

That's all anybody else is doing.

There has been more lip service than it took to build the tower of Babel. And that work was completed in one administration.

The smart birds aren't waiting for the politicians. They have already picked out their hollow trees for the winter.

All we know is that there is many a slip between the lip and the service.

Why is there a Republican and Democratic fight over relief when a hungry man will vote either ticket for a big, red apple?

And he will vote both tickets if you toss in a job.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLEY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The American Legion did themselves mighty proud by giving the President such a fine reception. They made him feel he alone was not entirely responsible for the war in China, England's dole, fog over Alaska and what-a-man's "it." He told 'em truthfully that the taxpayers couldn't stand another cash bonus and the boys said "OK, chief, we don't want to cause the taxpayers any hardship, but do you think a glass of beer would be asking too much for your service rendered?"

Yours, WILL.

Stage and Art Aspirants Get Tests at Tech

This is a week of tension at Carnegie Tech. Youthful aspiring artists, actors and musicians are going through a preliminary ordeal in which their talents are tested before they enroll in the College of Fine Arts.

Prospective drama students stand or pace the boards of the stage in the little theater, speaking their pieces. Upon the impression they make on the faculty of the drama school may depend their future careers.

In the painting and decoration department, talented youngsters draw and sketch and work out artistic motifs under the eye of art instructors.

In the music department, auditions have been completed and successful applicants chosen. Only half of the applicants could be accommodated.

Faculty heads believe technical tests in the arts are necessary to weed out applicants whose talents do not warrant the necessary expenditure of time and money.

Boy, 16, Held as Escaped Federal Prisoner

Louis Corey, 16, of Woonsocket, R. I., was turned over to United States Marshal J. C. McGregor by the county authorities, as an escaped federal prisoner, to be held pending commitment to a reformatory to be designated by Attorney General William D. Mitchell.

Corey was said to have escaped from officers July 7 while en route to the Idaho Industrial Reformatory at St. Anthony, Ida., by leaping from a train. He had been sentenced to serve four years by the Federal District Court in Phoenix, Ariz., for transporting a stolen automobile in interstate commerce.

A month later he was arrested in Greensburg with an automobile alleged to have been stolen in Pittsburgh. After being turned over to the Allegheny authorities he was identified as an escaped prisoner. Officers of the reformatory at St. Anthony informed government authorities they did not desire his return.

REED AND DAVIS UNDERWRITER SPEAKERS

Senators Slated for Talks At Afternoon Meet and Dinner of Insurance Men

Pennsylvania's and Pittsburgh's two members of the United States Senate were to address the forty-second annual convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters at their first general sessions today in the William Penn Hotel.

David A. Reed, senior senator, was to discuss "Some Side of The Approaching Congress" toward matters of interest to life insurance men. He was to be heard at 3 p. m. for a 30-minute period. He was expected to review proposed legislation coming before Congress during the term.

Senator James J. Davis will address the Davis dinner of the convention at 6 p. m.

GREETING BY MAYOR

Other speakers included Samuel Crowther on "Insuring Life Insurance," Miss Sophia Bilten of Philadelphia on "Financial Independence for the Woman," and the opening of the convention by President George E. Lackey.

Keynote of the convention was struck yesterday at a managers' conference by Alexander K. Patterson of Chicago, chairman, when he called the meeting a convention not of business men suffering from depression but of a healthy business in a wholesome condition discussing methods of continuing its healthfulness. Patterson is a former Pittsburgher, having represented a life company here for 14 years.

EXPLAINS DECREASE

Holgar J. Johnson, general chairman of the convention committee yesterday told the delegates the present small decrease in life underwriting is due not to the current depression but to by-product causes.

Apathy created by conviction that the depression makes new business impossible was one of the causes cited. Johnson urged careful intensive research into the causes of decreases. Admitting it is beyond the power of the life insurance salesman to end the depression, he denied the causes of sales loss are beyond correction.

MARION DAVIES REACHES HOME

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23. (Universal).—After a summer spent in Europe, Marion Davies, noted motion picture star, returned yesterday to Los Angeles to be greeted by a group of friends as glad to see her home as she was to be here.

She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mulhall, Leonore Bushman and Eddie Kane, members of the same party that left here last May. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Netcher (Constance Talmadge) also were in the party but they stopped in Chicago to visit friends and relatives.

With her when she arrived at the Santa Fe Station, Miss Davies had a German dachshund, one of those funny little dogs that is a dog-and-a-half long but only half a dog high. It was presented to her in Bad-Nauheim. According to its pedigree the dog's name is Ergo but it already has begun to answer to a number of other names.

50,000 BOTTLES SEIZED BY DRY RAIDERS

Alleged Supply House for Bootleggers Also Yields Burlap Bags and Corks

An alleged bootleg supply establishment in a four-story building at 1 Magee street was raided yesterday by prohibition agents who reported seizing more than 50,000 empty bottles, 500 burlap bags, 5,000 stenciled sacks, a half-ton of corks and a large quantity of wrapping paper.

Frank Mallinger, said to have been arrested in the raid, was released on a $1,000 bond for a hearing before the United States Commissioner Monday.

The seized articles, filling five trucks, were hauled to the government warehouse. It was reported the bottles had blown in them the names of brands af liquor or bore printed labels.

The raid was the second of its kind since Saturday. In a bottle plant in Forbes street, 50,000 empty bottles were seized, according to the agents.

U. S. ACCEPTS "ARMS' TRUCE"

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Hugh R. Wilson, representing the United States in the League of Nations disarmament discussions, announced today his government accepted the Italian proposal for a one-year armaments holiday.

He added, however, that the United States excluded from the truce its destroyer building program, undertaken principally to relieve unemployment.

Naotake Sato, the Japanese spokesman, rejected the Italian proposal, urging that it should be considered at the time of the general disarmament conference next February. Mr. Wilson, however, asserted that if the truce is to have any value at all it should be concluded at once.

6 SAVED IN FIRE IN HILL STORE

Six persons were rescued from their apartments on the second and third floors when fire broke out in the dry goods store of Max Cramer at 1540 Center avenue at 3:30 a. m. today and for a time threatened to spread through the entire three-story brick building. Battalion Chief Frank Harris estimated damage to the building and contents at $5,000.

The fire was discovered by Robert Nixon, a bellboy in Bailey's Hotel, opposite the store. He ran into the street and attracted the attention of Benjamin Neiman, living next door; Bernard Sokalski, of 532 Herron avenue; David Maretsky, of 815 Cassatt street, and Irvin Jenkins, of 1600 Center avenue, who were in a restaurant nearby.

Nixon sounded an alarm, and then joined the other men who broke down the front door and made their way to the apartments above and aroused the Cramer family. They carried Cramer, his wife, Rose, their daughters, Lillian, 19, and Freda, 7, a son, Norton, 17, and aided another daughter, Sadie, 21, to the street.

This scrubless Rinso way saves your clothes!

NO woman is strong enough to scrub a family wash every week without feeling it. No clothes are sturdy enough to be scrubbed and boiled every week without getting threadbare long before they should.

Use Rinso . . . the granulated soap that soaks out dirt—saves the clothes—and washes them whiter than ever! The suds do it. Rinso suds are thick, creamy, safe! The makers of 40 leading washers recommend Rinso.

Cupful for cupful, this compact soap gives twice as much suds as the lightweight, puffed-up kind. Get the BIG package.

An eminent scientist writes the head chemist in our Research Department:

"Chesterfield Cigarettes are just as pure as the water you drink"

THE WATER YOU DRINK is tested from time to time by expert chemists to make sure that it is free from all injurious substances—that it is pure.

So it is in the manufacture of CHESTERFIELD cigarettes. Expert chemists test all the materials that are used in any way in CHESTERFIELD'S manufacture, to make sure that everything that goes into CHESTERFIELD is just right.

THE LEAF TOBACCO IS PURE. Long steel ovens—drying machines of the most modern type—scientifically "dry" and clean and purify the natural tobacco leaves by exact high-temperature treatment.

Then the shreds of cut tobacco, as you see them in your CHESTERFIELD, are again heated, cleaned and purified. From these pure tobaccos the cigarettes are made, and only the purest paper—the best that can be made—is used for CHESTERFIELD.

Cigarettes used to be made in an old-fashioned way, by hand. Now, no hand but yours touches CHESTERFIELD—another purity safeguard.

CHESTERFIELDS are made and packed in clean, sanitary factories where even the air is changed every four and one-half minutes—purity again.

ALL THIS CARE is taken to give you CHESTERFIELDS as nearly perfect as cigarettes can be made. Delivered in a moisture-proof, sealed package, they reach you just as good, just as pure as when they leave the factory. Good . . . they've got to be good—they're just as pure as the water you drink!

WARNING!

If You're Told Some Other Preparation Is the Same as GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN

BEWARE

THIS warning is printed to put the public on guard against a deception which may be practised against those who seek genuine Bayer Aspirin for pain, headaches or colds.

We take this means of warning you, so you may be able to protect yourself and your family against the results of such deception.

BEWARE!

Other preparations, we are informed, have been offered at times to those who ask for Bayer Aspirin; and even represented in some cases as being "the same as Bayer Aspirin."

Watch Out! Remember that years ago doctors warned the public against "headache remedies," some of which are heart depressants and unsafe for many people to take.

Then remember how Genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And was acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain, and was prescribed without hesitation by eminent physicians. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

What folly, then, in the light of these things, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Don't gamble—KNOW.

The genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets are made by a special process, under careful supervision of scientists, in the Bayer Laboratories, with over 25 years of highly specialized experience.

So when you want SAFE relief for pain, cold or headache, ask for BAYER ASPIRIN. You have a perfect right to ask for what you want. And an equal right to get what you ask for.

Look for the name BAYER on the package. And the word Genuine in red. Insist on Genuine Bayer Aspirin and refuse substitutes.

CUBS' OLD THREE-YEAR MARK STANDS

THOUGH CONNIE MACK'S three time champions have attained the distinction of being the first major league ball club ever to win 100 or more games per season three years in succession, they will not equal the record for total number of games won through a stretch of three consecutive campaigns. That mark was set so high by the late Frank Chance's old Cub machine in Chicago that it never has been threatened.

Frank Chance

In capturing three straight National League pennants in 1906, 1907 and 1908, the old Cubs rolled up a total of 322 victories. They established the present all-time major league record for one year in 1906 by winning 116 games, followed up with 107 in 1907, and missed the hundred mark by only one game with a string of 99 in 1908. The A's have no chance of rising to the Bruin heights this season. They won 104 games in 1929 and 102 last year, and even if they were to win all of the five games they have yet to play for 1931, making 110 for the year, 316 would be their best possible total for the three campaigns.

THE THREE-YEAR record isn't the only one that stands to the credit of Chance's famous club of more than two decades ago. Over a span of five seasons the Cubs set another mark that never has been equaled. After failing to 90 victories in 1908 they passed the century line again in 1909 and 1910 with 104 wins in each season, so that they won 100 or more games in four out of five straight seasons and for the five-year period as a whole amassed a total of 530 triumphs.

The A's have succeeded in hanging up a new American League record for games won in three straight seasons, as their present total of 311, with further additions possible, surpasses the old mark of 307, which the Yankees established with 91 in 1926, 110 in 1927 and 101 in 1928.

THE NEAREST THE Pirates can now come to finishing in the first division is a tie with Brooklyn for fourth place. The last remaining mathematical chance to pass the Robins vanished when the Flatbush club won its game in St. Louis yesterday.

To get even a tie for fourth place, not only would it be necessary for the Bucs to win all of their three remaining games, but the Robins, in addition, would be required to lose all three games they have yet to play. One win for Brooklyn or one defeat for Pittsburgh will give the easterners a clear title to perth No. 4.

PAUL WANER was doing more walking yesterday than Dan O'Leary. No fewer than five times in seven trips to the plate did he parade to first base over the bad-ball route, and no big league hitter ever received a higher tribute than the Philly pitchers paid the Pirate righthander in passing him four times intentionally. That's probably a record for intentional walks to one batter in a single game. The high mark for passes in general in one game is six, received by only one player. Walter Wilmot, of the Chicago Nationals, in six times up on August 22, 1891. Many have walked five times, but the only Pittsburgh player to get five in a nine-inning game was Gus Suhr on April 29, 1930. Three Pirates are included among the players sharing in the record of having received two bases on balls in one inning—Ed Abbaticchio in 1907, Honus Wagner in 1917 and Earl Sheely in 1929.

Jewel Ens

NOW THE end. Tomorrow's game with the Phillies will drop the curtain on baseball in Pittsburgh. It will be the home farewell of Jewel Ens as manager of the Pirates and the last appearance of the Bucs here until next April.

By that time, probably, there will be a new face or two in the lineup, with some old ones missing. No deals will be attempted, however, until the signing of a new pilot to replace the departing Ens has been announced. This is expected soon after the season closes. It still looks like George Gibson.

FOR THE TIME being at least, Heine Meine is the leading pitcher of the National League in number of games won this season. Yesterday's hard-earned victory was his nineteenth of the year, putting him a step ahead of Fred Fitzsimmons, Ed Brandt, Bill Hallahan and Jumbo Elliott, each of whom has won 18.

Heine will get a chance to shoot for No. 20 in Chicago Saturday or Sunday, and if he wins he may be the only Heydler hurler to reach that mark. The veteran righthander has won 13 of his last 19 games and seven in a row. In these last seven games, all of full length and one going four extra innings, he has allowed only 12 runs and 48 hits.

QUITE A TRIBUTE to the manner in which Pitt conducts her athletics may be seen in the announcement that football relations are to be resumed with Penn, starting with a game in Philadelphia on November 5, 1932. In her new cleanup policy, Penn is not taking on any opponent having a system open to the slightest question, and that the Panthers have been selected for one of the big home attractions of the Quakers next year is evidence that Pitt measures up to the highest ideals in eligibility rules and everything else pertaining to clean college sport.

LOCAL FANS ARE hopeful that the home-and-home custom was followed when Pitt and Penn agreed to renew relations, as that would mean that Penn would play here in 1933. The Quakers visited Pittsburgh only once a war-time team being defeated by the Panthers at Forbes Field in 1918, 37 to 0. All of the nine other games between Pitt and Penn, of which the Panthers won seven, tied one and lost one, were played in Philadelphia, the last in 1925.

If any of the country's big college teams will have a tougher schedule than Pitt in 1932, the fact has not yet come to light. Meeting West Virginia, Duquesne, Army, North Carolina State, Notre Dame, Penn, Nebraska, Carnegie Tech and Penn State in the order named will be anything but a joy ride.

THE CLOSE FIGHT that Joe Sekyra gave Tommy Loughran last night before losing the split decision probably means only that Tommy was not quite up to his top notch of understimated his opponent. Normally Sekyra is by no means to be rated on par with Loughran as a ring workman.

Andy Kerr, Jr.

A closer heavyweight fight is in prospect tonight, when Ernie Schaaf meets Tuffy Griffiths for 10 rounds in Chicago. Griffiths is always dangerous, but Schaaf appears to hold a sufficient edge to win.

SONS OF FAMOUS football fathers have been standing out in college gridiron activities this year. There are Willie Heston, Jr., and his brother Jack; Fielding Yost, Jr., Alonzo Stagg, Jr., Pat Page, Jr., and many others. Coming along a few steps behind them, still in the scholastic ranks but giving promise of being a college star in years to come, is a lad whose career will be watched with particular interest in this section. He is Andy Kerr, Jr., son of the former Pittsburgh High School and W. & J. coach, who also was assistant grid coach at Pitt and Stanford and Panther track mentor. Andy, Jr., is only 15, but he has won himself a berth at left halfback on the Hamilton (N. Y.) High School eleven. According to reports, he is fast, throws a fine forward pass, kicks well and has good football sense.

NATIONAL GOLF FAVORITES IN THIRD ROUND

BUFFALO COUNTRY CLUB, WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 23. (AP)—Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, who lost to Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare in the final in 1928 and 1930, advanced to the quarter-finals today in the thirty-fifth women's national golf championship by defeating Frances Williams of Lehigh, Pa., 5 and 4.

Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., joined Miss Van Wie in moving into the third round. Miss Orcutt registered a 5-and-4 victory over Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis.

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, the defending champion, successfully got by her second opponent when she overwhelmed Mrs. Charles Eddis, of Toronto, Canada, 5 and 4.

MRS. CORSON BEATEN

Mrs. Leo Federman, of New York City, also went to the third round as the result of her 2-and-1 victory over Mrs. Helen Payson Corson, of Philadelphia.

In a match that went 18 holes, Helen Hicks, Metropolitan champion, defeated Marion Hollins, of Santa Cruz, Cal., 1 up.

The Salem Country Club, of Salem, Mass., today was selected as the site for the 1932 Women's National golf championship, the United States Golf Association announced today. Previously it had been indicated that the Ekwanok Country Club, in Manchester, Vt., favored.

FRITZI STIFEL TRAILS

With nine holes to go, Mrs. Leona Pressler, of California, was 2 up on Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, W. Va.

Jane Brooks, the bespectacled Nyack, (N. Y.) girl who put out Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, Mo., yesterday, was having no end of trouble with Marjorie Kerr, of England, being 4 down after nine holes.

Enid Wilson, the British champion, went out in 40 to be 3 up on Mrs. Ariel Gant Nelson, of Dayton, O.

PAIR ARE TIED FOR GOLF LEAD

QUINCY, Mass., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Charley MacAndrew, of Quincy, and Dave Hackney, of Lowell, clipped a stroke off the Wollaston course's rugged 73 par to tie for the 36-hole lead in the New England open golf championship with totals of 145 yesterday.

Johnny Farrell, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Robby Cruickshank, of Purchase, N. Y., were in a second place deadlock with 146, and Gene Sarazen, of Great Neck, L. I., was next with 147.

Maxie to Battle Mickey in February

PARIS, Sept. 23. (AP)—Joe Jacobs, American manager of Max Schmeling, world heavyweight champion, said today Schmeling would sail in November for the United States to make an exhibition tour and would fight Mickey Walker either in Miami or Los Angeles in February.

Jacobs said Schmeling then would take on Jack Dempsey in June at a place to be decided later.

Jacobs added he was sure Gene Tunney, who retired undefeated in 1927, was returning to the ring and that "we'll accommodate him."

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: RUNNING A MILE CONSUMES LESS ENERGY THAN WALKING—An experiment conducted by the Nutrition Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, D. C., disclosed the curious fact that a fast walker will consume more energy in walking a horizontal mile than a runner who progresses at a slightly higher rate of speed. The saving in energy required is about 15 per cent in favor of the runner. (Reference: "Energy Transformation," by F. G. Benedict, p. 87.)

TOMORROW: THE TOWN WHERE SHAVES ARE AGAINST THE LAW

PARKS LEADS AT CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., Sept. 23.—Sam Parks, Jr., of the Highland Country Club, Pittsburgh, who established a record for Riverside invitation tournaments last year by winning the medal qualifying round with a 36-hole card of 152, tacked up a splendid 70 yesterday in the first half of the qualifier of the fifteenth annual tournament and is out today to shatter the record established last year.

Parks' 70 gave him a lead of one stroke over the veteran John Graham, of South Hills, and Frank Nash, of Highland, who tied for second with 71's. H. F. Miller, Jr., of Montour Heights, was fourth with 74, and Henry Lloyd, of Atlantic City, and F. E. Douglas, of Springfield, O., were deadlocked for fifth with 75's.

Parks put together nine-hole rounds of 35 each for his 70. He battled a heavy wind and had to play superb golf to hand up his one-day stroke lead over Graham and Nash. His card as compared with par:

Par, out	5	4	3	4	4	3	4	5	4—36
Parks—
Out	5	4	3	4	4	3	4	4	4—35
Par, in	4	5	4	3	4	5	4	4	4—37—72
Parks	5	4	4	3	4	5	4	4	4—37—72

Graham lost a stroke to par on the third hole, another on the fourth and one each on the eighth and eighteenth. He got birdies on the ninth and fifteenth. His card:

Out	5	4	4	5	4	3	4	5	3—37
In	4	5	4	3	4	4	4	5	5—38—75

Nash slipped over regulation figures on the fourth, tenth, sixteenth and eighteenth holes, and bagged birdies on the second and fifteenth. He and Henry Lloyd were the only two players in the field to negotiate the first nine holes in par figures. Nash's card:

Out	5	4	3	5	4	3	4	5	3—36
In	4	5	3	4	4	4	4	5	5—38—74

The field, which numbered approximately 180 players, is the largest in the history of the Northwestern Pennsylvania amateur title tournament.

Sport Vignettes

Carnegie Tech's football team showed great promise in beating Buffalo, 75-2, in the opening game at Buffalo last fall, and then failed to come up to expectations after being stopped by Notre Dame . . . Next Saturday, the Tartans again play Buffalo in the opener, and here's hoping they have the fight of their lives on their hands and last year's order will be reversed all of the way . . . Ray Montgomery, former Pitt star, was a ringside spectator at the Meyers Bowl fights the other night and didn't see any blocking that would lead him to recommend any of the fighters to his chief, Jock Sutherland, another fight fan.

Cum Posey, manager of the Homestead Grays, has been nominated as a school director in the Homestead district . . . Rochester, with its fourth straight International League pennant, soon will be in the class of Baltimore, under Jack Dunn . . . Baltimore got fed up on great teams, all pennant winners, the stars of which later went on to make up Connie Mack's star Philadelphia Athletics, and forgot baseball to attend the hoss races . . . Coley McDonough, fullback of the Scott High School football team, of North Braddock, is a cousin of Regis McDonough, last year's star on the same job . . . Regis is not in school this fall, but plans to enter college next year . . . Benny McArthur, McKeesport lightweight boxer, after figuring he was all set to enter West Virginia University, failed by a matter of 1½ credits to make the grade, but plans to keep plugging and to finish up with a college career to his credit.

Pitt defeated Penn eight times and tied it once in 10 games on the football gridiron before Penn called quits after a 14-0 drubbing in 1925, and now they're to meet again next fall, on November 5, on the old battle ground, Franklin Field, Philadelphia . . . Penn won 6-0 in 1923 and tied, 3-3, in 1919. All of the games but that of 1918 were played at Franklin Field, this lone one being waged at Forbes Field here . . . Harvey Harman, present Penn coach, was a star tackle for Pitt in three of its victories, in 1918, when he was a freshman, and 1920 and 1921, and in 1919 figured in the battle in which Bert Bell and Andy Hastings kicked field goals for the only deadlock.

Tom Davies was the star for Pitt in the most spectacular game of the series, that of 1920, in which he scored three touchdowns and threw a forward pass to Tom Holleran for the other one to down the Quakers, 27-21. . . . The 10 games between the two institutions were witnessed by 286,000 persons, according to Penn statistics . . . The teams first met in 1915, Pop Warner's second year as head coach at Pitt, and the last time in 1925, when Jock Sutherland had replaced Pop.

Jewel Ens, manager of the Pirates, has a good sense of humor and is quick on the trigger . . . What with all of the rumors going around that he may be replaced next season, he pulled an especially keen one the other day . . . The Bucco pilot was writing down his batting order when a friend hailed him . . . "Hello, Jewel," he popped. "Everything o. k. on the Western Front?" . . . "No," replied Jewel. "The Road Back."

PITT ELEVEN BRUSHES UP

The last rough practice session of the season is on tap for the Pitt Panthers today as Jock Sutherland puts the finishing touches on his team in preparation for the Miami game Saturday.

Johnny Niemi

Jock is perfecting his running attack, which he hopes will be potent enough to overcome the strong Miami ends. The Ohioans, while they never have been rated among the top-notch teams of the country, are usually ducked by the big fellows. They have a good record against major opposition.

This year Chester Pitser, former Illinois star, now coach of the Redskins, has a wealth of material to work with. He is building a strong supporting cast for the great Wilbur Cartwright, who has been running wild against all sorts of opposition for the past two years.

In Johnny Niemi, crack end, he has dangerous offense, for whenever this rangy lad gets hold of a pass, it usually means a big gain for the Redskins.

Sutherland is trying to prepare his forward pass defense for the opener, for Miami has heard of the Panthers' weakness in this department and probably will toss plenty of footballs around the Stadium Saturday.

In yesterday's Pitt scrimmage Joe Tormey was at center, and Johnny Luch and Tar Onder played the best part of the game at fullback and guard.

Two sophomores probably will be starters in the Panther lineup against Miami. They are Bob Hogan at quarterback and Meredith at tackle in place of Quatse.

The game scheduled at Forbes Field this afternoon between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies was called off on account of rain. As a result the two teams were forced to cancel exhibition games scheduled tomorrow and will remain over to play off the postponement. If event tomorrow's contest is postponed, the two teams will cancel exhibition games listed for Friday to play off the contest here.

The game marks the close of the Pirates' home schedule.

UNLUCKY THIRTEENTH

It remained for the Pirates and Quakers to stage one of the longest, as well as one of the most interesting, battles of the season at the home of the Buccos yesterday. With Heinie Meine in the heroic role the Oaklanders copped the battle in the thirteenth inning. The score was 3 to 2.

Meine, therefore, recorded his nineteenth victory of the season, but he had to give almost everything that was in him to win the fight. He will get a good rest for several days before attempting to reach the coveted 20-mark. The Crown Prince of Luxemburg is expected to twirl one of the contests with the Cubs. Meine stands a fair chance of being the only sharpshooter in the Heydler circuit to get as many as 20 triumphs in the season.

Such an eventuality would be quite a feather in the cap of the Dutchman, inasmuch as the Pirates have been in the second division throughout the long race.

Meine reeled off a slab masterpiece as he opposed three of Joe Shotton's hurlers. Through eight sweltering innings Heinie allowed only one hit. He retired the Quakers in succession, not reaching second until the sixth round.

Heine was in front with a 2-to advantage as the ninth opened

LAWTHER REBUILDS WESTMINSTER ELEVEN

NEW MATERIAL FAVORED FOR NEW SYSTEM

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Sept. 23.—Johnny Lawther is back at his old stamping ground here at Westminster, in complete charge of athletics after a year's sojourn in New Jersey, and he's set to start off on his new job by turning out a pretty nifty football team.

I was greatly surprised at Johnny's football coaching. He's a tough hombre, when you consider how gentle spoken he usually is and how mild-mannered. To hear him bark at the ballplayers and give 'em the old razzle-dazzle when they pull a boner, you'd never think he was the gentlemanly professor of the classroom; the calculating, cool and calm professor of psychology.

Lawther is succeeding Dyke Beede, former Carnegie Tech back, who resigned last winter after five years as head coach here. Lawther was basketball coach at the Titan institution for four years, until 1929, when he resigned and accepted a coaching and teaching job at Freeport (N. J.) high school. Johnny was unable to hit it with certain Westminster powers, and simply got out until a change was effected. The change took place. Beede left and they brought John back as head coach of both football and basketball.

NEW MATERIAL FAVORED

Lawther is planinng to build from the very ground up, and with the inaugural clash with the Slippery Rock Teachers only three days away, has a starting lineup in mind consisting of seven freshmen, two sophomores and two seniors. Obviously, the team will be inexperienced, for Lawther also is counting on freshmen for his main reserve strength.

There are only five lettermen on the squad at present. There were 11, but Walter Koricki, Joe Uram, Jim Perrin, Dave Morrision, Harry Michaels and George Hamas dropped from school. Russell Boone, captain last year; Ben Haldy, Emett Tweedy, Don Cleland and Bill Armour, stars last year, were graduated.

Those remaining are Dick Fuller, a guard; George Cebula, end; Capt. Glen Rehfuss, tackle; Glen Shaffer, quarterback, and Al Van Harper, halfback.

The wing jobs will be handled by freshmen. Swede Henneke, from Baldwin, L. I., and Harry Helmick, of Uniontown, have won starting jobs, with Cebula, a letterman, and either Mauno Siljander, former Pittsburgh Schenley High basketball star, or Harold Burry, of New Castle, in line for first string replacement berths. Helmick and Hennecke are big and fast and have exhibited above the ordinary in football brains.

STRONG AT TACKLES

Capt. Glen Rehfuss, a veteran and a good lineman, and young George Hollander, from Lawther's Freeport High team, appear set at the tackles. Dishong, who has been subbing here for three years, and George Kopp, a freshman, can have the jobs if they can beat out Rehfuss and Hollander. The task appears to be a tough one.

Dick Fuller, another veteran and one of the best guards in tri-state Class B ranks, and Irving Franklin, another Freeporte, have been placed at the guards and are doing very well, thank you. They'll be understudied by Bob Scarborough and Bob Rose, the latter also hailing from Long Island.

Lawther is using Pete Leyshock, from Farrell, at the snapperback position. The young man appears to be the goods. He isn't very heavy, but he has a lot of fight and is a fine tackler and strong defense man.

Coach Lawther has his own system. In his backfield, he uses a quarterback, a wingback, a fullback and a ball carrier. The wingback calls the signals, usually, and works with the quarter as a blocker and interfering back.

SILMAN AT QUARTER

Art Silman, developed by Phil Fridenbaugh at New Castle, is at quarter, with Bill Staples handling the fullbacking, and Shaffer, from New Wilmington High, at the wing position. Right now, Ketterer, from Rochester, Pa., is being used at the other halfback, which means he'll do a lot of ball-toting.

The alternate backfield consists of Sweeney, a frosh, at quarter; Harper, a fine blocker, and Young at the halves and Rush at full.

Last year, Westminster won four and lost five, beating Edinboro, Slippery Rock, Juniata and Bethany and losing the important ones to Wesh-Jeff, Allegheny, Grove City, Geneva and Thiel.

The schedule this fall calls for games with Slippery Rock, Adrian, Allegheny, Grove City, Juniata, Waynesburg, Thiel, Edinboro and Geneva on successive Saturdays. The Waynesburg, Thiel, Allegheny and Geneva games will be played away from home.

Lawther is being assisted by Earl (Buz) Dart, who played a tackle here at Westminster some years back. Earl is working with the linemen. Lawther taking care of the backs and the offensive play of the team.

If things go well, and the team gets 50 per cent of the breaks, it should improve on its record of last year, winning possibly six games. The new style of attack and an improved defense should account for this. You can pick your own six games.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 23.—New River College will open its football season next Friday night at Kanawha Park here, opposing Sue Bennett College, of London, Ky.

COACH PAULIE MAKES BOW

By JULIUS LEVIN

One of the feature attractions on this week's scholastic football schedule is the battle Friday between Taylor Allderdice, one of the favorites in the City League race, and Swissvale High School, under the coaching of Ed Paulie, former Wash-Jeff College gridder, who is making his bow as football coach at the school where he learned his gridiron fundamentals.

Ed Paulie

Allderdice, its squad bolstered by the return of many of last year's veterans, is heralded by close followers of the City League as one of the strongest contenders for the local championship, while Swissvale likewise has an experienced eleven.

All City League members engage in non-league contests this week. While the Allderdice-Swissvale game is an intersection affair that does not figure in the City League standing, this fact does not detract from the interest in the contest. The contest, slated for the Allderdice Field, promises to develop into one of the best early-season frays on the schedule.

SCHENLEY AT OLIVER

Other games involving local schools on Friday find Schenley at Oliver, South Hills at Peabody, Fifth Avenue at Carrick and Langley at Dormont.

Much importance is attached to all games as they will give the local coaches a chance to see how their elevens perform under fire for the first time this season.

School Notes

Due to the fact that Wash-Jeff College opens its home season on Saturday against the powerful West Virginia Wesleyan Bobcats, Coach Hank Day's Washington High eleven will play its week's attraction on Friday, opposing Nate Lippe's Aliquippa grid machine. Lippe's team started the campaign in an auspicious manner by soaking out Rochester 45 to 6.

Five night battles are scheduled Friday. Of course, the scott-Charleroi fray at North Braddock will be the headliner. Others find McKees Rocks opposed to Phil Fridenbaugh's New Castle outfit at New Castle; Redstone at Monessen, Girard at Meadville and Youngstown Rayen at Erie East.

Tom Hutter, one of the outstanding forwards in the W. P. I. A. L. basketball eliminations with New Brighton last winter, is expected as a student at Duquesne University and will be a candidate for the Duke varsity quintet this season. Hutter was picked as all-W. P. I. A. L. forward in the championship tournament played in the Stadium pavilion.

Allegheny High School, under the coaching of Harry M. Springer, former mentor at Bellevue and Wilkinsburg, faces a real test in its inaugural battle Saturday against Beaver Falls in Beaver Falls. The Valley eleven started its season with a 6-0 victory over the Alumni, Barry's 40-yard run providing the only score of the game.

Moe Rubenstein's Ambridge eleven fresh from its 6-0 victory over Monaca faces another important battle with a Valley rival next Saturday, when Rochester is engaged at Ambridge. Rochester showed a lot of class despite its 6-6 defeat at the hands of Aliquippa.

A "natural" that should appeal to the scholastic fans Saturday is the contest between Hurst High and Clairton at Clairton.

By HARRY KECK

The first show of the indoor boxing season in the Pittsburgh district is on the boards for tonight in the Palisades roller rink, McKeesport, when Promoter Jim McGirr opens h seventeenth consecutive season.

Jim's a game guy. He has taken it on the chin for several lean seasons now, but he sticks to his post in plucky fashion and the fans and boxers are for him.

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro welterweight, of Elizabeth, who stopped Young Saylor his last time out, is in the 10-round windup against Marty Simmons, a rugged young slugger from Saginaw, Mich., now making his home in McKeesport. Simmons boxed around here more than a year ago with Tom Malco. Young Joe Walcott and others of this caliber and has gained a lot of experience since.

Teddy Welch, of McKeesport, boxes Nick DePalmo, of Canton, O., in the eight-round semi-final. Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, and Nick Caruso, of Weirton, W. Va., are in the second bout and Kid Blues and Jimmy Lloyd, lightweights, of McKeesport, box the opener.

Between Rounds

The decision boxing law goes into effect in St. Louis tonight with an all-star card listed. Lou Terry and Sammy Ward, both of St. Louis, meet in a 15-round battle for the Missouri lightweight title, and there will be three 10-rounders.

Young Chaney, formerly of Philadelphia and Chicago, is in town working out at Edwards' gym, in Fifth avenue. He is a featherweight and will box under the management of Goody Rable.

Jimmy Moore, local Negro middleweight, who has been challenging Tiger Joe West, says the deft still goes, after West's battle with Paul Firpoe at the Bowl the other night. Or, if not West, Jimmy would like to box Firpoe.

Al Van Gura, Braddock amateur, will box professionally under the management of Frank Klaus.

Johnny Datto will arrive in town tonight for his 10-round windup with Jackie Wilson, local Negro bantamweight, at Bickers Park tomorrow night.

The preliminaries remain to be arranged for the reopening show at Motor Square Garden Monday night. Tony Herrara and Joey Goodman are in the main bout and Jim McVey and Bruno Sala in the eight-round semi-final.

Johnny Jennings will box Tommie Arnold and Bill Daniels will oppose Homer Gray in six-round bouts featuring a show for the benefit of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the Castle Bowl, New Castle, next Monday night. Four bouts of four rounds each also are listed.

DUKES PREPARE FOR W. VA.

"Forewarned may be forearmed," says Head Coach Elmer Layden, of Duquesne University, "but when you don't know what you are up against what are you going to do?"

Since Coach Layden is doubtless right about the matter of preparations for Coach Greasy Neale's Mountaineers, whom the Dukes meet Saturday, this is an uncertain week on the Bluff. The Dukes admittedly are without knowledge of the West Virginia University team or the methods that will be used against them.

Layden had decided to make the best of a rather bad situation, however, and his men are to finish their last day of work on the weaknesses shown in the opener, and then to proceed in shaping an attack against the Mountaineers.

If passers and receivers were available, Layden would lose a few of the wrinkles which now adorn his brow. But, lacking tossers, he is working to produce a good kicker and an effective running attack.

Fred Cristina and George Chacko are two fast backs who have this desirable quality, while Ben Pawlina and Silvio Zaninelli, despite their weight, also can lift their heels.

Red Sullivan likely will get the call over Bud Devinney as the starting quarterback for the locals.

The Dukes will go to Uniontown for their final workout Friday afternoon and will stay at the Summit Hotel there overnight, proceeding to Morgantown shortly aftern noon Saturday.

W. VA. HELD TO TIE

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 23.—The freshman team held the West Virginia varsity to a 6-6 tie in a practice game yesterday afternoon, with Tom Canich, the quarterback find, starring with his line smacking.

NAVY LOSES OLD DICK GLENDON

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Richard A. Glendon, Old Dick to thousands of crew racing enthusiasts, has resigned as head coach of the Navy's oarsmen. He passes from the sport in which he has been a leading figure for 30 years.

Glendon's resignation was announced from the Naval Academy by Capt. John Wilcox, Jr., head of the athletic department. The statement said Old Dick would be succeeded by C. A. (Buck) Walsh, his assistant for the last four years.

Glendon entered the service of the Academy in 1900, when he became its rowing coach, and remained for 21 years, giving way in 1922 to his son Young Dick, now head crew coach at Columbia University. Young Dick, after winning the Poughkeepsie Regatta in 1925, resigned, and for two years Robert Butler, of the University of Washington, reigned at the Academy.

During the time Butler held reins at Navy, Old Dick went to Columbia as assistant coach to his son, reversing positions they had held at the Academy before Young Dick took over the head coaching job when his father quit.

Then in 1828 Old Dick returned, and topped off his career by winning the Poughkeepsie regatta last spring for his fourth triumph in that Blue Ribbon event of the collegiate shell world.

The elder Glendon now is at his South Chatham, Mass., home and will remain there in retirement from active participation in racing, Navy officials said. He is 67 years old.

OVEREND AIDS ROCKNE FUND

Clarence (Buddy) Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Carnegie Institute of Technology, has been appointed district chairman of the Rockne Memorial Fund campaign.

C. Overend

A national campaign, to raise a fund of $1,000,000, to build and endow the Rockne memorial, will be carried on throughout the country this fall under the general direction of Albert Russel Erskine, of South Bend. Overend will be aligned with Erskine's committee.

Of the total fund, $650,000 is required for construction of the memorial, and $350,000 for endowment.

The Rockne memorial will be a supplement to the new stadium, and the ground upon which it will stand will be the old Cartier Field. In length 350 feet and 275 feet wide, the building will rise 86 feet above its site.

In line with Rockne's known desires, the memorial is planned to provide athletic and recreational facilities for the undergraduate body at Notre Dame as a whole, rather than members of varsity teams.

Mementoes of the great coach, a permanent record of all donors to the memorial fund, and a large fireplace on which will be placed the seals of the various universities are among the unusual features planned for the huge building, in addition to the regular equipment of the modern field house.

The Carnegie Tech gridders, who are to open their season against the University of Buffalo at Buffalo Saturday, will leave for the battle at 6 o'clock Friday evening.

Local sports writers, photographers and artists were guests of the Tartan athletic department at a steak dinner last night, following the daily workout.

Ed Yeckley, former Penn State star, whose son is captain at Princeton this fall; Lefty McIlvain, Red Stewart and John Picura, a brother of the former Penn State player, were visitors at yesterday's workout, in which Capt. Armentrout took his place behind the line.

PIRATES-PHILS GAME OFF

Buzz Arlett batted for Clise Dudley in this round, his single being the invaders' second hit. Bartell and Klein also made singles in this inning, the enemy forcing a deadlock.

The Pirates left no less than 13 runners on the sacks in the regulation nine rounds and they left enough stranded in the extra rounds to win a couple of games. In all they left 20 runners on the bases.

Pie Traynor delivered a significant hit in the thirteenth to sway the game. Suhr started with a walk. Manager Ens and Traynor decided to throw aside the often tiresome bunt, and Pie put on the hit and run with Gus. The captain followed through with a pretty hit to left. Suhr taking third. P. Waner was passed intentionally to fill the sacks and Piet drove a long fly to Taitt to score Suhr with the winning run.

Brother Paul drew four intentional bases on balls in his last four trips to the plate. This is probably a new record for purposed passes. Paul won five walks in all, his feat being within one of the record for a nine-inning game. Many batters have walked six times in a regulation game, but the specacle of four intentional passes in a row is most unique.

Southpaw Stew Bolen opposed Meine at the start, but he came out in the second in favor of Dudley. Phil Collins went to the slab in the ninth and fought it out with Heinie.

Cards to Split World Series Pot 30 Ways

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The Cardinals, 1931 National League champions, held a meeting yesterday and voted to split into 30 equal shares their winnings in the coming World Series with the Philadelphia Athletics, title winners in the American League.

Each one of the 25 players, Manager Gabby Street, Secretary Clarence Lloyd, Coach Clyde Wares, Trainer Harrison Weaver and Assistant Trainer Kirby Samuels will come in for one-thirtieth of the team's "take," which will be either 60 or 40 per cent of the competing teams' pot from receipts of the first four series games. The players also voted $500 to Groundkeeper Bill Stocksieck.

NET PLAY NEAR SEMI-FINALS

Quarter-final hostilities comprise this afternoon's program of action in the ninth annual Harvard Cup interscholastic racquet tourney, as the scene of combat shifts from the Trees Field rectangles of Pitt to the fine Shady Side Academy court battery in Fox Chapel. Torrid tussling is in prospect as surviving seeded stars vie with upset-seekers in a valiant effort to crash the semi-final bracket, the caliber of competition being by all odds the highest in recent history of the crimson event.

Favored competitors contrived to hustle through yesterday's campaign without exception. Stocks Surge Up — Lone Star Gas Active

STOCK MARKET PRICES SURGE UPWARD

Many Shares Advance 3 to 15 Points in Brilliant Recovery; Railroads Soar

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—To the swift succession of spectacular economic developments in the past three days, Wall street today responded with the most brilliant market recovery since the war debt moratorium of June.

Stock exchange officials followed the banner share selling move more promptly by relaxing their and open market after two days of the most stringent restrictions the World War. Trading moved confidently to higher levels, with a good effect both here and in Paris.

Many stocks moved up 3 to 15 points. Price advances averaged an average pace of more than 4 points in active trading. Violent advances occurred in the rails. Such issues as American Telephone, New York Central, New Haven, American Tobacco B and Allen Chemical gained 6 to 8 more. Issues selling up 4 or more included United States Steel, Consolidated Gas, American Can, Woolworth, National Biscuit and others. Trading was active. Some conservative brokers initially regarded such an advance as too rapid.

The wage reductions initiated in the steel industry which may affect some 1,000,000 workers, if generally accepted, and the talk of reductions in railway wages threatening the pay of some 1,300,000 workers, could not, of course, be regarded as of wholly favorable import even by those bankers and economists who believe that a general wage revision must precede recovery.

The midweek business statistics again gave but faint clues to the expected autumn recovery. The steel trade review indicated a slight gain in operations, but the Iron Age placed output at 26 per cent of capacity, against 43 a week ago. This publication was inclined to take a pessimistic view of the prospect of any quick pick-up in automobile manufacturing. The publication Steel pointed out the continued good demand for structural steel as somewhat encouraging. The freight car loadings figures were for the week of Labor Day, so not comparable to the full business week preceding. Electric power consumption for last week was off 3.4 per cent from last year, a little better comparison than that of the first two weeks of the month, which were off 4.1 per cent.

STEEL PRICES HOLDING UP

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(INS)—Iron and steel demand has subsided to the August level and ingot production has receded from 30 per cent to 29 per cent of capacity, according to the weekly Iron Age summary to be released tomorrow. Prospective business in some directions, notably in public construction, work is still fairly promising, but in other lines and particularly the automobile industry the outlook has become increasingly obscure.

The review says in part:

"In announcing a cut of 10 per cent in common labor rates effective October 1, the Steel Corporation and other steel producers bowed to the inevitable after weathering two years of slack operations. In finally recognizing the necessity of cutting the coat to fit the cloth, they have set a precedent which it is now believed, the railroads must follow, whether they obtain partial relief through rate advances or not. Railroad buying programs are extremely slow in developing, and it seems unlikely that they can really get under way until the rate and wage questions are settled.

"Prices are holding surprisingly well, although not subject to severe tests. Steel producers see no point in suggestions that the saving from wage cuts be passed on to buyers. They point out that what they gain through the reduction will probably fail to lift them out of the red."

SHORT SELLING BAN LIFTED

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The resolution in regard to short selling adopted by the governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange Monday has been rescinded.

The reports to the business conduct committee on short positions, however, are to continue as ordered.

Stocks Show Remarkable Stability in World Financial Crisis

Some disposition exists in speculative quarters to discount the impressive resistance shown by leading stocks on the grounds that the trading has an artificial aspect in view of the virtual prohibition of short selling. However, the best opinion is that the market has given a remarkable demonstration of technical strength in the face of extremely troubled circumstances.

Although the stock exchange authorities took steps to prevent real trading this policy was adopted because New York had to bear the principal burden of foreign liquidation, the world's markets were closed with exception of Paris.

The genuine demand for stocks is critical and broad, as shown by the investigations from every part of the world, a development that negates gossip concerning the immediate future of the market.

Relief in high Washington circles is optimistic as to the effects of the suspension of the gold standard of Great Britain. It is felt that the action of Great Britain will improve the whole situation in that country and the United States will benefit. It is pointed out if there is to be an important economic shift it is better to have it over than pending. In official circles it was pointed out that American banks had comparatively small balances in London, which will minimize their losses by virtue of the change.

Bankers ascribed the advance in acceptance rates which is equivalent to a reduction in price to normal seasonal influences and also said it was hastened by the unsettled condition of sterling following the suspension of gold payments by Great Britain. Dealers apparently anticipated that with sterling fluctuating widely the American acceptance market may be called upon to handle a larger volume of bills than formerly. The advance restores prices to the level of May 19. The Federal Reserve Banks buying rate for bills remains unchanged. Dealers rates have been below that level and the change today moved their quotations in line with the banks.

Since operating earnings of Gold Dust Corporation have covered dividend requirements so far this year, it is probable directors will declare the regular quarters dividend of 62½ cents on the common stock at the meeting this week. The strong cash position is an additional reason for continuing the present rate. The company has no funded debt and more than $9,000,000 of cash in the bank. At the end of 1929 outstanding funded debt totaled $15,907,000, which has been retired out of current income from cash obtained through acquisition of other companies.

New York Central Railroad through its subsidiary the Securities Corporation of the New York Central Railroad has been acquiring additional stock in Delaware Lackawanna and Western Railroad during recent sessions in furtherance of its plan eventually to make the Lackawanna a part of the Central system. Prior to its recent purchases Central owned 77,228 shares of Lackawanna which represented only 4.57 per cent of the stock outstanding. This cost $10,794,150 or about $140 a share.

Reading shares continued to command a $1 premium in the loan market. Thus maintenance of the short position in that stock was proving an expensive proposition, as might be seen from the fact that it is costing them $100 a day in premiums to borrow each 100 shares of the stock. In other words, in order to secure the minimum of an even break while this premium is in force it would be necessary for the stock to decline at the rate of a point each day. The plight of the shorts in Reading is not difficult to understand. In the first place there are only 1,400,000 shares of the common outstanding, and of this amount about 58 per cent or more than 800,000 shares is owned by the New York Central and the Baltimore and Ohio.

Meaning of English Gold Suspension Discussed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

JUST WHAT DOES THE ABANDONMENT of the gold standard by England mean? This question has been asked innumerable times since Sunday night when the news of the change in British policy spread to the financial centers of the world. Few have been able to supply the answer. Perhaps no one is in a position to accurately predict the ultimate results. The news was viewed by most Americans as a vague but not understood calamity. Perhaps if it were better understood it would not have been viewed as quite so much of a calamity.

The relationship of gold to currencies and credit is an extremely complicated subject. Lengthy and tedious books have been written about it. Economists rarely agree on it. It is doubtful if anyone fully understands all the workings of the system. The development of currencies and credit has been a slow growth. It has been under way for so many centuries, in so many parts of the world and under such rapidly changing conditions that it may be regarded as a great man-made machine which is so complicated that it frequently gets out of control and the mechanics are not always quite sure how to fix it.

There are, however, a few principles underlying the operation of gold, currencies and credit, the understanding of which may make the importance of the English suspension of the gold standard more clear.

What the Gold Standard Means

THE FIRST MONEY in general use was made of metal. Gold and silver were most frequently used. They were employed because they had definite commercial value as raw materials; they were not perishable and because their worth was sufficiently great to give a small amount of metal a large exchange value. It became easier to settle an account with an ounce of gold than with a wagon load of wheat. Governments realized this and simplified exchange by stamping a given weight of metal of a certain fineness with their official insignia. This brought the first money into being.

As foreign trade developed and credit became more intricate the trouble of transporting large quantities of gold or silver was eliminated by the substitution of paper money. This currency was nothing more than the promise of a government or an authorized bank to pay a certain amount of gold or silver on demand. To give the promise standing it became the practice to keep a certain proportion of gold on hand as a reserve to redeem these pledges.

Inflation Not Infrequent

MANY TIMES IN THE PAST governments, either through extravagance or the pressure of stern necessity, have taken advantage of the currency issuing privilege and have printed more paper money than they had the means to redeem.

When a government cannot redeem its currency in gold the value of the money declines. This value is influenced by the demand for the money in foreign trade to some extent but mostly by the extent of the confidence in the country's ability to resume gold exchange in the future.

Most of us think of money as a thing of fixed value, but its worth fluctuates. When commodity prices are high and money cannot buy much, it is said to be cheap. When commodity prices are low, money is expensive. When a government suspends gold redemption its paper money declines in value.

Other aspects of the suspension of the gold standard will be discussed in this column in the future.

Unselfishness Can Be Our Salvation From Present Economic Ills

By B. C. FORBES

SELFISHNESS CAN become suicide. Selfishness commonly springs from ignorance, especially lack of vision.

Unselfishness—nothing else—can effect a cure of this country's and the world's distressing, complicated ills.

B. C. Forbes

THE CZAR lost his crown and his life because of blind selfishness. Unbridled ambition fanned by vanity and selfishness cost the Kaiser his crown. History is crowded with illustrations of selfishness which proved suicidal.

FRANCE IS TODAY the most selfish leading nation in my opinion. Thus far she has largely escaped retribution. She revealed her mercenary policy during her negotiations with the United States for the repayment of her war debts to us and never has agreed to a settlement comparable with the creditable settlement made by Great Britain.

Again, France came dangerously near wrecking President Hoover's moratorium plan. If our government had been as finicky, as obstructive, as mercenary as the French government chaos would have been precipitated.

I may or may not be betraying a secret by disclosing that it was only after strong pressure that France recently agreed to match dollar for dollar in granting credits to the British. France would have been perfectly willing to let America shoulder the whole burden. But for once France was induced to toe the line.

HOW FAR SELFISHNESS has been responsible for the present plight of Britain isn't easy to determine. Going back a generation, anyone familiar with the facts knows that the land-owning and capitalistic classes in general arrogated to themselves an entirely unfair share of the national income. The working classes were underpaid.

Since the war the tables have been completely turned. The radicals, led by Socialists and inflamed by Communists, have dominated the government and have foisted—forced—upon the nation heavier burdens than could be met. In vain was it impressed upon them that their action was pushing the country toward disaster.

The day of reckoning has come.

TURNING TO OUR own country we also can see how ramoant selfishness, begotten by lack of vision, has resulted in untold trouble.

Our foremost industrialists went blindly ahead multiplying productive facilities, without stopping to analyze the probable ultimate outcome. Our leading financiers, bankers, corporations and many others not leaders, took advantage of an unwary public by manufacturing and disposing of millions and millions, even billions, of stocks, notes, bonds, mortgages, investment trust shares—anything and everything in the form of "securities" that could be palmed off on investors and speculators eager to get rich quickly without toil.

Politicians, too, gaily joined the orgy; they raised and spent taxpayers' money without counting the final cost.

THE WAY OUT? Unselfishness, broader and longer vision. That will prove the most enlightened selfishness.

WHAT WOULD IT avail our mightiest banks, for example, to continue to become more and more liquid, to the point of becoming nothing but safe deposit vaults, if their shortsighted action strewed the country with wreck and ruin and revolution?

You and I may think we are very wise when we clutch every penny, refuse to spend and become misers. That, too, is blind selfishness, for let such conduct be carried far enough, and our whole economic structure would collapse.

JUST AS SELFISHNESS can become suicide, so can unselfishness prove our salvation.

LOUGHRAN GIVEN HARD FIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(INS)—The lesser lights among the heavyweights will do well to avoid Joe Sekyra, of Dayton, O.

Just a washed-up trial horse a few months ago, the tousel-headed Bohemian, who weighs only 177 pounds, has made a remarkable comeback. He hung up his twelfth straight victory when he gave the sensational Charley Retzlaff a shellacking two weeks ago, and acquitted himself creditably last night in losing a 10-round decision to Tommy Loughran, the dapper Philadelphia boxing master.

Loughran, ranked third among the heavyweights by the National Boxing Association, had a tough time of it with Sekyra. Tom won six rounds, three went to Sekyra and one was even. But the fight was fairly close until Loughran clinched the verdict by a spirited rally in the tenth round.

For the most part, the bout was a battle of left hands, with the speedy Loughran usually beating Sekyra to the punch. Tom's blows lacked steam, however, while Sekyra's slashing left hooks opened up two cuts around the Philadelphian's left eye and another under the chin.

Charley Retzlaff, whose defeat by Sekyra put the latter back on the fistic map, made it 32 knockouts in 37 starts by stopping Dick Onken, Long Island German, in the second round. Onken took enough punishment to fell an ox, but protested when the referee led him, dazed and bleeding, to his corner.

WORLD TROT MARKS FALL

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 23.—(AP)—World records fell thick and fast at yesterday's Grand Circuit meetings, featured by the victory of Protector in the Kentucky Futurity.

In winning the 3-year-old classic, Protector not only lowered the world record for 3-year-old trotters to 1:59¼, but also trotted the fastest two-heat race on record by a trotter of any age. The first heat was trotted in 2:01½. The time lowered the 2:00 and 2:01¼ by Hanover's Bertha last year. Protector is owned by Ralph R. Keller, of Auburn, N. Y., and was trained and driven by the international horseman, Will Caton.

A secondary feature was the Ashland Stake, won by Tronia Britton in 2:02½, 2:01 and 2:01¾. The three heats constitute a new world record for a race of that length.

The good Syracuse, N. Y., trotter, Young Senator, won the opening race, making a new record of 2:02½ in the opening heat.

De Paul Wins Over Detroit Eleven, 12-0

DETROIT, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Bubbling with pride, the De Paul University football squad was en route to its Chicago home today after administering a resounding 12-to-0 defeat upon the surprised gridders of Detroit University. The game was played last night before 15,000 spectators, most of them legionnaires attending their convention here. Quarterback Jim Doody carried the ball over for the first score and Jim Roche, end, tallied again when he intercepted a pass and raced 48 yards.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Boston's two major league baseball clubs—the Red Sox and the Braves—line up against each other at Braves' Field this afternoon in a charity game for the benefit of the city's unemployed.

SOCCER LEAGUE SET TO OPEN

By TOM BIRKS

The Pittsburgh Central Soccer League swings into action Saturday afternoon with four well-balanced games. The Pittsburgh Rovers clash with the Pittsburgh Celtics, at Leslie Park. Clan Douglas makes a trip to Crafton Heights, Westinghouse goes to National Tube at McKeesport and German Sport Club opposes Union Switch and Signal at Swissvale.

It would appear Jack Campbell's Union Switch and Signal team has a fine chance to swing into the leadership. Weak spots are showing in the team, however. Nelson does not appear to work with Angus McNair.

Leslie Park fans will see the real battle when the Rovers and Celtics meet. Both played independent games last Saturday, and appeared poorly. But they are from the Strip, and it is natural much good natured rivalry will be on tap.

As a means of raising funds for injured players, the Western Pennsylvania Soccer Football Association in session last evening decided to go through with the proposed Charity Cup competition.

Quite a number of young players were reinstated as juniors. They are as follows:

CHAPTER XII.

We go to find Willy. His room is a wilderness. The bed has been dismantled and stands upended against the wall. It has to be made larger. Willy has grown so much in the army that he does not fit it any more. Planks, hammers, saws lie strewn all around. And on a chair there glistens an immense dish of potato salad. He is not there himself. His mother explains that he has been out in the scullery a whole hour, scrubbing himself clean.

Frau Homeyer is on her knees before Willy's pack, rummaging through it. Shaking her head, she hauls out some dirty rags that were once a pair of socks. "Dreadful holes," she murmurs, looking up at Albert and me disapprovingly.

"Cheap stuff," I say with a shrug.

"Cheap? Indeed," she protests bitterly. "Shows how little you know about it. It's the best wool, let me tell you, young man. Eight days I was running up and down before I got it. And now see! Through already! And you won't find their like anywhere." She contemplates the ruins with an aggrieved air. "I am sure there must have been time at the war just to pull on a pair of clean socks quickly, at least once a week.—Four pairs of them he had last time he went out. And now he has brought back only two—and look at them!" She passes her hand through the holes.

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted as a schoolboy, tells the post-war story of a group of war comrades who march home when peace is declared. They reach their home city in a pouring rain, puzzled and disconcerted by the alien world which meets them after several years in the trenches. Ernst finds a barrier between himself and his family. He has changed—yet they treat him as if he were still a schoolboy. He goes to seek his comrades, calling first on Albert Trosske, whose brother Hans has lost both feet at the front. The situation is strained. Albert and Ernst seek a pretext to escape from the house.

Now Go On

NEIGHBOR'S CHICKEN

I am just about to take up his defense when he himself enters in triumph, announcing at the top of his voice: "There's a piece of luck for you! Another aspirant for the Order of the Dixie! There's going to be fricasseed chicken tonight, lads!"

Waving in his hand like a flag is a fat rooster. The green-golden tail feathers gleam, its comb crimson and from its beak there hang a few drops of blood. "Though I have had a good meal, water begins to gather in my mouth.

Willy swings the creature to and fro blissfully. Frau Homeyer straightens up and utters a shriek. "Willy! But where did you get it from?"

Willy announces with pride that he saw it behind the shed, caught it and killed it all inside of two minutes. He slaps his mother on the back. "We did learn something out there, you see. Willy wasn't acting-deputy-chief-cook for nothing, I tell you."

She looks at him as if he had murdered a child. Then she calls to her husband. "Oscar," she moans in a broken voice, "Come look at this—He has killed Binding's pedigree cock!"

"Binding? What Binding?" asks Willy.

"The cock belongs to Binding, the milkman next door. Oh, how could you do such a thing?" Frau Homeyer sinks down in a chair.

"I wasn't going to leave a good roast like that just running around," says Willy in astonishment, "not when I had him as good as in my hand already."

Frau Homeyer is not to be comforted. "There'll be trouble about it. I know. That Binding man has just a terrible temper."

MOTHER AGITATED

"But what do you take me for?" asks Willy, beginning to feel really slighted. "Do you think I let so much as a mouse see me? I'm no novice, you know. This makes just the tenth I've swiped now. A jubilee bird, you might say. We can eat him in perfect comfort and your Binding won't know one thing about it." He shakes it affectionately. "You will taste good! Do you think I should boil him or roast him?"

"Do you imagine I would eat one little bit of it?" cries Frau Homeyer, beside herself. "You take it back at once."

"I'm not quite balmy," explains Willy.

"But you stole it," she laments desperately.

"Stole it?" Willy burst into laughter. "That's a nice thing to say! Commandeered, this was. Boned. Picked up, if you like. But stolen? When a man takes money, then perhaps you can talk of stealing, but certainly not when he just bags a little bit of something to eat. In that case, we would have stolen a lot in our time, eh, Ernst?"

"Sure, Willy," I say. "He just ran out to meet you. I dare say. Same as the one at Staden that belonged to the O. C. No. 2 Battery. Remember? And you made fricasseed chicken for the whole company out of it. Half and half—to one hen add one horse—that was the recipe, wasn't it?"

Willy beams and taps the stove plate with his hand. "Cold!" he says, disappointed, and turns to his mother. "Haven't you any coal then?"

Frau Homeyer cannot speak for agitation; she can only shake her head. Willy reassured her with a wave of the hand. "Never mind. I'll scrape up some tomorrow. For the moment we'll make do with this old chair here—it's pretty wobbly, you see, not much good for anything more really."

Frau Homeyer looks at her son uncomprehendingly. She snatches the chair and then the fowl out of his very hands and makes off with it to milkman Binding's.

Willy is righteously indignant. "So off he goes and sings no more!" he says sadly. "Do you understand that, Ernst?"

CONDITIONS DIFFERENT

I understand well enough that may not take the chair—though up the line we once burned a whole piano to make a dapple-gray horse come tender; and that at home here we must not yield to every involuntary twitching of our fingers—though out there everything eatable was looked on as a gift from heaven and by no means a problem in morals; perhaps I can understand that also. But that a fowl that is already dead should be taken back to where the merest recruit knows it can only cause a lot of unnnecessary trouble—that seemed to me just plain madness.

"If it isn't the custom, then we must starve; that seems to be the way of it, eh?" says Willy, quite nonplussed. "And to think we might have been having fricasseed chicken inside half an hour, if only we'd been on our own with the boys. And I meant to serve white sauce with it, too!"

His eye wanders from the stove to the door and back again. "The best thing for us to do would be to make ourselves scarce," I suggest. "Looks to me as if there's trouble brewing."

But Frau Homeyer is back again already. "He isn't at home," she says, out of breath, and, all excitement, she is about to open her mind further when suddenly she notices that Willy has put on his things. Immediately it all is forgotten. "You aren't going away already?"

"Just for a little bit of a patrol, mother," he says, laughing.

FIND DISTURBANCE

Side by side, our hands in our pockets, we set off at a swinging pace down Castle street. "Shouldn't we collect Ludwig?" I ask.

Willy shakes his head. "No, let him sleep. That's better for him."

The town is disturbed. Motor lorries filled with sailors go roaring through the streets. Red flags are flying.

Bundles of handbills are being unloaded and distributed in front of the town hall. The people snatch them from the hands of the sailors and glance through them eagerly. Their eyes shine. A gust of wind swoops down upon the packages and sends the sheets whirling up into the air like a flock of pigeons. They catch in the bare branches of the trees and hang there rustling. "Comrades," says an old chap in a field-gray overcoat, "things will be better now, comrades." His lips are quivering.

"Hullo! Looks as if there's something doing here," I say. We set off at the double. The nearer we approach to the cathedral square, the denser is the throng. The square itself is crammed with people. A soldier is standing on the theater steps and making a speech. The chalky light of a carbide lamp is flickering on his face. We cannot understand properly what he is saying, for the wind sweeps over the square in spasmodic, long-drawn gusts, each time bringing with it a wave of organ music in which the thin, halting voice almost drowns.

A vague, tense excitement is hanging over the place. The crowd stands like a wall, almost all are soldiers, some of them with their wives. Their silent faces have the same grim expression as when they peered out across No Man's Land from under their steel helmets toward the enemy lines. But something more is in their look—hope for a future, elusive expectancy of a new life.

Shouts come from the direction of the theater and are answered by a subdued roar. "That's the stuff!" cries Willy joyfully. "Now the fun begins!" Arms are raised. A sudden tremor passes over the crowd, the ranks begin to move. A profession forms itself. Shouts, cries: "Forward, Comrades!"

"Of all things!" exclaimed Miss Arabelle Trott.

She was peering, furtively, from behind the curtains of her living-room bay window, watching a van being unloaded at the adjoining house.

"It's kind of nice furniture, Miss Trott," ventured Lindy, her hired "girl."

"Look—if that isn't a cat!"

A small car had driven in and a man, getting out, had lifted a fluffy white object from the car.

"Yes'm, it's a cat, one of them funny fuzzy kind that come from some heathenish country, Syrasiabia or Japersia, I think it is, I remember——"

"No matter where it comes from," snapped Miss Arabella Trott, "it's a cat and there's no fence between our houses and if that cat so much as spits at Hero I'll have the law on him!"

She turned to a pop-eyed little King Charles spaniel sleeping on a red velvet cushion.

"We won't let the nassy ol' cat spit at you, will we, Hero?" she asked with a world of tenderness.

Hero opened a pair of dull watery eyes and feebly wagged the tip of his tail, whereupon, after this exertion, he went to sleep again.

"He known every word I say," Miss Trott declared, turning back to the bay window.

GUESS AT CONTENTS

"He's took the cat inside," Lindy explained. "I've heard if you take a cat to a new home and put butter on his feet he won't run away."

"Cats are dumb enough, that may be true. I suppose that's the Mr. Whitehall who bought the Sargent place."

"Yes'm," Lindy agreed. "His name is Harold J. Whitehall. I seen it on those shrubs that was left yesterday, printed on a label. The shrubs come from Hopedale. Look—I'll bet you that's one of them electric ice boxes!"

Miss Trott and Lindy watched to the last article that was removed from the van. They wondered and guessed at the contents of many packing cases, they identified an electric radio, and even Miss Trott admitted that some of that green leather library furniture was "grand."

"If it wasn't for that cat—the idea of a full-grown man having a cat for a pet!"

INTRODUCE SELF

"He ain't married, Miss Trott, Mrs. Tucker told me so. She used to live in Hopedale. She said he was a real nice man who never got married because he had to take care of his mother and a sick sister. I guess he's alone now. I wonder what he does for a livin'?"

"I don't care, so long as he minds his own business and keeps his silly cat at home and doesn't try to get neighborly."

"You never did set much store by men, did you, Miss Trott?" Lindy commented. Lindy had been married three times, and when her third husband died Lindy decided that she had done her share of marrying.

The next forenoon Mr. Whitehall was out in his yard. More flowering plants and shrubs had arrived and a rose arbor. He wore khaki overalls and a floppy straw hat and seemed to be quite happy over his work. There was no sign of the cat and Miss Trott let Hero out again. She sat on her back porch, reading the morning paper.

Suddenly there came a surprised and frightened "Yipe-yipe!" from Hero. Miss Trott was down in the yard instantly.

Hero was across on Mr. Whitehall's lawn. He had backed away from a big peony plant and was yapping furiously. The white Persian sat contentedly beside the peony, utterly ignoring the dog.

Mr. Whitehall removed his floppy straw hat, revealing a tanned, smiling countenance, kindly blue eyes and a thick crop of wavy dark hair, a trifle silvery at the temples.

"There is nothing to be alarmed about, Miss Trott," he said, "those little spaniels are quite intelligent; they know better than to tackle cats."

"Hero is a gentleman," Miss Trott said, stiffly. "What I am worrying about is that your cat may scratch his eyes."

"Omar is also a gentleman. He never fights unless he is attacked. My name is Whitehall. I have been admiring your rock garden. That is something I know nothing about. I thought perhaps I might make one back there where the rubbish heap is so unsightly."

Hero yapped louder at Omar. Omar polished his fat jowls, blinked at the sun and did not even look in Hero's direction.

"If my dog chases your cat you mustn't blame him." Miss Trott said, picking Hero up and tucking him under her arm.

"Oh, no, not at all, Miss Trott. Cats and dogs are not naturally friendly, although my sister had a dog who used to play and eat and sleep with Omar. Don't worry about your spaniel, he won't annoy me."

"Annoy you?" Miss Trott spoke sharply.

"He's too small to damage the flowers and he is too—er—intelligent to attack Omar."

Miss Trott made no reply.

Mr. Whitehall, it seemed, was his own housekeeper, although twice a week Mrs. Hennessey came to clean and do the washing.

Lindy used to chat with Mrs. Hennessey when they were hanging out clothes and she had a flair for getting information, which she would repeat to Miss Trott.

"Mr. Whitehall don't do no work, Mrs. Hennessey says. He gets a lot of mail and once she seen an awful big check for thousands, she couldn't see how many thousands, and some typewriting saying that it was a quarterly dividend. I wonder what dividends are and how much they cost, Miss Trott."

MISS TROTT EXPLAINS

Miss Trott tried to explain what dividends were.

"Anyway, Mrs. Hennessey says that he is an awful nice man."

Miss Trott tossed her head.

"There's no such animal as an awful nice man," she declared. "Even my father had some faults, so I've heard mother say."

"Well, if a wife can't find a man's faults nobody can. I guess we all got faults. I wish I knew how he makes them dahlias bloom so early and so big—you never have no luck with dahlias, do you, Miss Trott?"

Mr. Whitehall kept to his side of the property line. He never molested Hero except once when Hero tried to bury a bone in his iris bed and then he merely said, "Listen, little feller, why not take that somewhere else?"

Miss Trott overheard this and watched. Mr. Whitehall did not touch Hero, he merely waved his floppy hat at him. Hero yapped at him and Mr. Whitehall laughed. Miss Trott grudgingly admitted to herself that Mr. Whitehall was turning out to be a quiet neighbor.

And then, a couple days later, Poncho dashed into Mr. Whitehall's yard. Poncho was a police dog owned away down the street, a dangling rope at his collar told of his breaking away. Hero was prowling about, yapping at Mr. Whitehall's cat. Poncho made one great leap and pinned little Hero to the ground with a heavy paw. Hero "yipe-yiped" terrifically. Miss Trott screamed hysterically and started to run across the lawn to help her pet.

It was not at all necessary for Omar took in the situation. He made one leap and landed on Poncho's back. He made a series of motions with his claws that brought blood through Poncho's thick hide and basso-profundo howls of pain from Poncho.

Poncho lost interest in holding Hero down. He lost interest in everything except getting away from there. Omar rode and clawed as far as the sidewalk, then hopped off and came strolling back.

Hero lay whimpering, almost helpless from fright. Miss Trott was kneeling beside him. Omar came up and seemed to smile at Miss Trott, then he rubbed against Hero and—miracle—Hero wagged his tail and wasn't at all afraid.

OFFERS AID

"My goodness sakes alive, can you beat that!" gasped the pale Miss Trott. She gingerly reached out her hand. Omar rubbed his chin against her hand and sat down beside Hero.

"I doubt if that dog visits us again, Miss Trott."

It was Mr. Whitehall speaking. He had come out unhurriedly.

"I—I guess he'd have killed my dog if your cat hadn't saved him, Mr. Whitehall—and look at them, real friendly."

"Oh, yes, they are both gentlemen, they will get along famously now."

"That's—that's lovely. I never liked cats before. By the way, Mr. Whitehall, if you care to have me help you, I'll show you and give you some seedlings."

"Will you, Miss Trott? That's splendid of you."

That afternoon Lindy sat on the back porch shelling peas for dinner and watching Miss Trott and Mr. Whitehall working side by side over his rock garden, with Hero and Omar playing around them.

"I wouldn't be a mite surprised if they got up and got married," Lindy said to the canary in the cage overhead.

"Tweet-tweet!" the canary replied.

Great Britain's Problems

TRINIDAD, Col., Sept. 21, 1931.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The English government has speedily reached the pass which I thought they would reach.

The old fashioned men who constitute the coalition government apparently have had no conception of the seriousness of the situation.

They took half hearted measures or mistaken measures.

They cut the salaries of the teachers of the nation and of the defenders of that nation and immediately had a Navy revolt on their hands.

They have not the courage to deal drastically with the dole, the SUPREME EVIL which is mainly responsible for bringing the country to its present condition.

They proposed merely a ten per cent cut in the dole when they should have proposed at least a twenty-five per cent cut and should have limited the dole, as Germany has done, to supplying food for those who are in actual need.

The tariff measures proposed by the coalition government are inadequate.

A tariff impost of from 25 to 50 per cent on practically all imported articles would not only bring in a large income, but would do much to re-establish British industry. The tariff taxation, consequently, would be but little felt. But the proposed increase in income taxation constitutes a burden hardly to be borne by a nation already broken by excessive taxation.

Income taxation in England should be reduced and MUST BE REDUCED.

It is too great a burden on industry, and being concentrated on the enterprising and employing classes is a direct handicap to enterprise and employment, thereby affecting employes as well as employers.

In a word, the excessive income taxation hampers industry.

The tariff would stimulate industry.

The dole is an unbearable burden which cannot continue.

What England needs is a government of men of modern thought with the competence to realize these facts and the courage to take the necessary vigorous action.

A conservative government would probably have Baldwin at its head. He is old-fashioned, too. But if progressive men like Beaverbrook and Rothermere were in the government, such government might be equal to the situation.

The suspension of specie payments is not disturbing, however, except as an evidence of a critical condition.

The inflation due to the internal circulating of paper money will be distinctly stimulating to business in Great Britain, and that stimulation will tend to revive industry and employment and to relieve the enterprising and creative classes from the unduly hampering restrictions and burdens of depression.

In other words, in good times an utterly inadequate specie currency is adequately enlarged and inflated by private paper.

In bad times this private paper is diminished by forced conservatism and by banking limitation. And, morever, the specie currency in circulation is reduced by hoarding, so that a drastic contraction of the circulating media aggravates the depression, unduly burdens the borrowing classes and consequently restricts enterprise and reduces employment.

A certain amount of inflation over a limited period would be beneficial, not only in England but elsewhere, especially as the practical total demonetization of silver throughout the world has made an extreme currency contraction everywhere.

As things exist today, the bankers run the finances of the world and run them in their own interest.

In an ideal situation the government should control finances in the interest of no particular class, but for the general good, and to meet varying conditions which arise.

The action of the British government is a step in this direction.

(Signed) WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Gold Move May Help Trade

Great Britain's abandonment at least temporarily of the gold standard is a counter deflationary, or, if you will, an inflationary move.

William Randolph Hearst makes this clear in his comment on the historic move. In drawing his conclusions, which are printed above today, the publisher points out:

"The suspension of specie payments is not disturbing . . . The inflation due to the internal circulating of paper money will be distinctly stimulating to business in Great Britain and that stimulation will tend to revive industry and employment and to relieve the enterprising and creative classes from the unduly hampering restrictions and burdens of depression."

Inflation is, of course, a narcotic, and, unless administered with supreme restraint and vigilance, can readily defeat its own purposes.

Yet in the present overdeflated world, a moderate dose may well prove constructive, but, of course, as Mr. Hearst has indicated, only if accompanied by economically sound attempts to balance the budget, reduce the impact of excessive income taxes, and eliminate non-essential governmental outlays.

The business significance of the suspension of the gold standard in Great Britain lies in the fact that the country, in the midst of stress and strain, creates for itself a closed monetary system, which is far more subject to domestic manipulation, control and management than the gold standard, which reflects international policies and decisions.

The new policy, born of necessity, constitutes a reversal of the deflationary, or contracting, program which since 1925 has weighed down British industry and diminished its relative place in the sun.

For the time being at least, the new monetary program removes the paralyzing effect in England of falling commodity prices and should give the stimulus of rising prices.

But, as Mr. Hearst has indicated, this tonic of monetary ease is beneficial only "over a limited period," and must be held in check by extremely wise financial administrators.

It is neither a cure-all nor a substitution for elimination of waste and inefficiency and other non-monetary factors which contributed to the waning of British prosperity.

A Giant Hemlock

A Somerset County Discovery Reveals the Noble Proportions Sometimes Attained by Our State Tree.

The Legislature at its last session passed a law designating the hemlock as Pennsylvania's state tree.

A tree thus honored should be of commanding size, majestic and awe-inspiring.

If there are any who believe the hemlock does not measure up to these requirements, we commend their attention to a tree of that species discovered by V. M. Bearer, district forester in charge of the Forbes State Forest, which lies in Westmoreland and Somerset counties.

Mr. Bearer reports a hemlock near Reels Corner, Somerset County, with a circumference of 22 feet, one inch, at a height of one foot above the ground, and a circumference of 14 feet, eight inches, at a height 4½ feet above the ground.

Probably asleep somewhere in the desert's sands, or down in Wall Street trying to raise money for the National Committee deficit.

All in all, it is rather a sleepy, depressing scene, but we must take modern history as we find it.

Washington Was Right

(Editorial from Saturday Evening Post, Issue of September 19.)

WASHINGTON was right—meaning George Washington, not Washington, D. C., in warning America against foreign entanglements. When we took the initiative in trying to help Europe our intentions were good, but they have paved an exceedingly doubtful, if not a dangerous, road for us.

Actually, we played out of turn. The initiative was with Germany under the Young Plan, or, failing that, the proposal for a moratorium should have come from England. We could then have assented without committing ourselves, as all Europe feels we have, to cancellation of the war debts and the post-war loans for reconstruction which were lumped at the time of settlement. For despite the disclaimer when the moratorium was proposed of any intention to cancel, in the opinion of Europe these debts are practically in the discard. Nor is it probable that Germany will resume payment of reparations at the end of a year or of 10 years—at least on anything like the old basis. And as long as France uses reparations, or other money made available by reparations, to prepare for war, it is perhaps just as well that she should not.

WE CANNOT help people out of a morass by plunging into it with them. But the bankers, brokers and miscellaneous internationalists who led us into the swamp are the ones who have been most insistent on our getting in deeper. It is not alone economic mud into which they are dragging us, but political mire as well. Only international babies who are still on the bottle believe that we can plunge headfirst into Europe's economic troubles without getting smeared from head to foot with her politics.

The report of the Wiggin Committee, as was to be expected, for it was headed by one of America's leading cancellationists, not only implies a drastic scaling down of the reparations—which is the first step toward ultimate cancellation—but it questions our tariff policy.

Germany's plight is not due to reparations. She has paid none. The United States, assisted by England, has loaned her the money to pay them. But more than that, our bankers and brokers have floated one large loan after another. A part of these loans was spent in rehabilitating Germany's industry, another part was blown in on extravagant and non-productive municipal and social projects. Naturally, Germany was willing to borrow as long as anyone would lend . . . .

SO FAR as we are concerned, we are getting exactly what we deserve for bad banking and our inability or unwillingness to see a crisis coming that has been building up right before our eyes for months and years. Our international bankers have been babes in the black forest.

The leading editorial in the London Times of July 27 contained some statements that are quite pertinent to our own situation. Under the heading, "The Lesson for Britain," these sentences occur:

. . . The main lesson of the international crisis for this country is that national stability depends upon the measure in which a state can inspire confidence not only abroad but among its own nationals. It is precisely from a lack of confidence in the direction of its domestic policy that this nation has the most to fear. No one with any sense of the interdependence of nations will grudge the heartiest cooperation to the present government in their efforts to rescue others, provided that at least the same energy and initiative be shown by the government in rescuing our own people from dangers which differ only in degrees . . . The British taxpayer would cheerfully make great sacrifices on behalf of the unfortunate, both in his own and in other countries, provided that he has some guarantee that those sacrifices will not be wasted. Unhappily such a guarantee is entirely lacking . . . .

AND, UNHAPPILY, such a guaranty is entirely lacking in our own case. Under present conditions, debt cancellation does not mean rehabilitation for Europe, but so many more billions for armaments, a policy in which France is of course the conspicuous offender. Loans and credits do not help put men to work. They help keep them idle by enabling European countries to finance the dole . . .

And if we send good money to Europe after bad, will the bad trot docilely back home hand in hand with good, or will both decide to be naughty and stay in the old country?

And why, if there must be great armaments and a dole, would it not be more logical to build up our own Army and Navy and inaugurate a dole for our own people, vicious and destructive as the dole has proved to be, instead of indirectly supplying the money for these purposes to Europe through loans and by canceling the debts? Safety—and charity—should begin at home.

THESE questions are, of course, purely academic, for Europe regards the war debts as good as canceled and Germany is determined to stop paying reparations. So it is time we gave a little attention to our affairs at home. They need it almost as badly as Europe's. Over there, over there, it is France, Italy, Germany and Britain for themselves first, and properly and patriotically so. Over here we are all pulling for pet nations, with America and her interests panting along in the rear.

There is nothing the matter with America except damfoolishness.

League Court Illusions

Europeans Know That Americans' Hope for Non-Political Decisions From Tribunal Is Groundless.

Some Americans may hope for non political decisions now and then from the so-called World Court of the League of Nations, but Europe knows better.

Such is the conclusion of the Chicago Tribune, expressed recently in an editorial discussing the pro-French decision, handed down by the Court by eight votes to seven, in the Austro-German Anschluss dispute.

The Tribune said:

"The division of the Court perfectly represents the political cleavage of Europe, the majority opinion dominated by the French policy of restraining the restoration of German influence, and the minority opinion by the governments disposed to assist it within reasonable bounds.

"This is a disclosure, while it causes no surprise in Europe, which should be helpful in the United States, where our adherence to the Court has been urged on the ground that it is an independent and disinterested judicial body, which is to be depended upon to establish and develop a system of international law based upon and governed by juridical science and free from the influence of nationalist interests and policies.

"No such illusion exists in Europe in responsible quarters. It is not, we are confident, even among American advocates of the Court, the controlling consideration. Our leading advocates also favor our entrance into the League of Nations, a political agency, and the fact that the Court is the creature of the League and will on all important issues express the political viewpoints and interests of the constituent nationalities in legal formulae naturally does not offend Americans who favor our entrance into the parent body."

When Men Drive Women to Henna

The greatest cross which the average woman has to bear in this life is the torment of waiting for a letter from the man she loves!

* * *

More hearts have been broken by the postman than by any other man in the world!

A man may have a Scotch conscience about everything else on earth. He may pay his bills the moment they are due, settle his obligations on the spot, and even return a borrowed BOOK or an UMBRELLA.

But, he will never be fair or just or merciful about answering letters! At the very thought of writing a personal letter his conscience stops working and his heart goes on a strike.

He may know that his mother's heart is aching for news of him, that his wife is almost on the verge of nervous prostration for fear that something has happened to him, or that some girl is weeping all the mascara off her eyelashes in the belief that she is "forgotten."

* * *

And yet he will put off writing "until tomorrow!"

And, when tomorrow comes, he'll probably rush out—and telegraph!

* * *

Of course there ARE men who DO write their wives every day of their lives. But these are not average men, but rare heroes or martyrs. And the vision of one of them in the throes of composing that daily-duty letter has torn many a gentle stenographer's heart with pity.

Letter-writing is woman's grand passion—and man's pet abomination.

A woman REVELS in spilling her thoughts and emotions all over notepaper, but the very sight of a pen paralyzes a man so that he HASN'T any thoughts—and his only emotion is acute pain.

* * *

With a hundred interesting things to tell he has to INVENT something to say, in order to cover four sides of a small sheet of paper. When he begins describing the scenery to you, you may know how he is SUFFERING.

Every letter that a woman writes is a joy and an inspiration. Every letter that a man writes is a mental abortion and reads like a "forced confession" at the end of the third degree.

And then, nine times out of ten, when he has finished it in sweat and agony, he will stick it in his pocket and forget to MAIL it!

* * *

And some hapless woman will keep wearing out the hall rugs, going to the front door to look for it, for another long week!

Isn't It So?

Some men's honesty is a result of lack of opportunity.

No man wants the earth more than the seasick passenger aboard ship.

Another way to burn the candle at both ends is to be the kind of driver that gets bumped at both ends.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

—By O. O. McIntyre—

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Much of Broadway's cafe gaiety was transferred to trans-Atlantic liners bolstering sagging receipts with week-end cruisers this summer. Instead of speakeasy hooch in a hide-away humidity, passengers could have the real stuff along with the tang of fresh breezes.

While a number of such voyages were sedately respectable outings of parents with their children, a large percentage were wild orgies. They offered an elegant opportunity for hennaed and peroxided ladies and current sweet papas "to get away from it all."

The entertainment on the boats was in charge of a master of ceremony. Thus did a number of Broadway actors "at liberty" find temporary employment during a seasonal lull. It was their job to keep things whirling and according to reports they did with a whoop.

Some of the boats gave complimentary passage to cabaret, stage and radio performers to provide a celebrity tinge. There was one especial jaunt that may get backflare into first pages. Movies were taken of the high jinks for the news reels.

Two rather hilarious couples hiccupped out of the bar while cameras were at work. Not noticing the cameras, but supposing it to be a revel on deck, they joined in with a few monkey-shines, including a little drunken love making with wrestle holds.

The next week the wife of one of the gentlemen was at a movie when the news picture was shown. She thought it a case of double identity—her husband was on a fishing trip—and waited for the next show to see it again. Then dashed out and brought the wife of her husband's fishing companion.

With the cut in Atlantic rates, the week-end cruises are likely to be abandoned. The slash has already stimulated travel abroad, so much so vessels assigned to such trips will be called back into regular trade. They were high jinks while they lasted.

It is possible that in 10 years New York's elevated railroad, once a "blue chip" stock, will be a memory. With the coming of light under the glowering "els," has come expansion and opulence. Especially is this pronounced on Sixth avenue from Fifty-third street to Fifty-ninth. Six years ago the shabbiest stretch in midtown, it now bristles with hotels, theaters, apartments and smart shops.

* * *

The blackest splotch under the "els" was the brass district in Allen street. The sun had not shone there for years until the structure was removed. Allen street is already perking up and in a year or so will be lined with modern apartment houses, fronting a sweeping boulevard. This is the first definite step to remove the sunless, airless and depressing spots known as New York slums.

Prowling in the neighborhood of Allen street, I came upon a group of gamins, smudgy and ragged, playing a sidewalk chalk game. Turning Gentleman Bountiful for the moment I inquired: "How would you boys like a nice big dish of ice cream?" A violently freckled red head teetered on one foot in his hop-scotching and replied: "What do we look like—beggars?" Uptown later in telling of the experience I was informed this attitude is quite general in poorer districts of New York. Children are being taught to resent charitable overtures. My informant explained it was part of Communistic propaganda that is more deep rooted in such areas than elsewhere in the city.

Paul Whiteman and Vincent Lopez have Negro valets who practically run their private lives. Each of the bandmen is inclined to stoutness and his diet is carefully supervised. Their valets know to whom they will talk on the phone and other intimate details of their lives. But what appeals to me most about the valets is their names. Paul's is Gus and Vincent's is Elmer.

From a Park avenue monthly account of a party: "And O. O. McIntyre, who was there with his wife, danced with a set of beautiful young twins who seemed to think the gray-haired columnist was quite a beaux."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The working woman over forty—

How much chance has she against the young, pretty girl who may not have half as much sense but has all the scenery?

"She hasn't a chance!" thousands of discouraged, older women will cry. "The job always goes to the young, pretty woman. She may be a perfect little fool, lazy and unreliable. And the older woman may be trained, steady and intelligent—but the tiny waist line and the unlined face win out."

That is what practically every older woman worker will tell you and that is what she honestly believes. But the Women's Bureau of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association didn't believe it. They had heard that statement, countless times, but they felt there was a catch in it. So they decided to make a survey . . . scotch the boogie, if such it was.

It was a thorough survey, through all Illinois manufacturing concerns, and it accumulated mountains of reports. And, at the end of it, Miss Anne Hinrichson, director of the bureau, announced that it proved that . . .

The best jobs go to the older women!

Which is going to be plenty of news to many a disgusted lady and it's dollars to doughnuts that she won't believe it.

"The older woman worker," says Miss Hinrichson, "has a decided advantage where qualities of judgment, attention to detail, sustained perserverance and patience are required. Where speed is required the younger woman has the better opportunity.

"Between the untrained older woman and the untrained girl the latter has the advantage. More than two-thirds of the applicants for jobs in factories are young girls, but of the older women who apply, a higher percentage are accepted, our survey shows.

"The younger girl is refused more jobs, gets more jobs and holds them a shorter time than the older woman.

"We find that beauty is practically non-essential, but the attractiveness of appearance which comes from good grooming is highly important. Good dressing, in the estimation of the employer, is neatness and suitability. Elaborate or expensive dressing has kept more women out of jobs than lack of clothes.

"Well, strong women of alert minds are preferred over young girls of low physical resistance."

"Then why can't I get a job?" cries the desperate Widow Brown, home from her tenth day of fruitless tramping after a job. "I have all she says I should have. I'm neat and well groomed. I'm trained and dependable and still quick, and my mind's alert, if I'm not worried sick. Yet they turn me down every time and give the place to some little nitwit."

Yes, Widow Brown has most of the essentials. But, nine times out of 10, she has something else which discounts all her virtues and makes her a Total Loss as a worker.

"Self pity and dull or pessimistic attitudes are the worst handicap of older women," says Miss Hinrichson.

Not the bloom on the pretty face beside you, but the sneer and sag on your face, lick you, sister.

You don't have to have that sneer and sag. The years may rob your skin of its beauty but they cannot rob your heart of its blitheness—unless you let them. That sneer and sag mean that you've taken the count. You are no longer sure of yourself. Why should an employer feel sure of you if you don't feel sure of yourself?

Text For Today Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.—Matthew, xi:28, 30.
